Ontario's Taxpayers Get Break

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario renewed its attack on the federal government Monday with a $178-million shuffle in provincial government spending, which Treasurer Darcy McKeough said was made necessary by the "gross inadequacies" of the June 23 federal budget.

New-car buyers, students, wine drinkers and those in search of housing were chief beneficiaries of new provincial budget measures, to be financed by a $96-million cut in government programs and an $82-million reduction in civil service spending.

Premier William Davis told reporters the package, supplement to the province's April 7 budget, was also an effort "to fill the void of national leadership in the present economic crisis."

About $66 million of the $178 million was to bolster the sagging housing and automobile industries this year and another $94 million was committed for housing in 1976-77.

Measures expected to have a direct effect on some Ontario consumers include:

—Cash rebates of the five per cent provincial sales tax on new North American-built cars and station wagons sold between now and Dec. 31, 1975. The average buyer will save an estimated $175 on his purchase and the government is expected to pay out $24 million in rebates.

—Subsidized mortgages at 10 1/2 per cent for an additional 9,000 low-cost housing units under the Ontario Housing Action Program.

—Reduced provincial mark-ups on imported and domestic wines following federal government reductions on excise taxes for wine.

There were no further initiatives to counteract the increase in gasoline and oil prices beyond the 90-day freeze on retail prices imposed by Premier Davis last week. Ontario residents will still have to pay the 10-cent-a-gallon excise tax imposed

Quang To Appeal

MONTREAL (CP) — A former South Vietnamese general, Dang Van Quang, said Monday he will fight a deportation order by Immigration Minister Robert Andras because "there is no proof of the allegations against me."

Quang has been accused of involvement in drug-trading and corruption in Vietnam before he arrived in Canada May 15 on a special one-year ministerial permit.

Andras said in Ottawa Monday the permit has been cancelled and the former special adviser to ex-president Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam has been asked to arrange for admission to another country.

The decision can be appealed, he said, but the government will fight any effort by the former general to remain in Canada.

Quang said in an interview that the decision meant he had become "the victim of a political campaign organized by people of another ideology."

"It's a purely political decision. I always believed Canada was a hospitable, humanitarian country."

Bakers Set to Shut Major Supermarkets

INSPECTING damage done to wall of his bedroom by bolt of lightning, John Voss, a chief warrant officer with the electrical branch at CFB Esquimalt, can thank his lucky stars. He had just opened the curtain to the window to view the rare lightning storm when a flash struck the gable to the roof, a few feet away from his head. The resulting fire caused an estimated $2,500 damage. Storm started four new forest fires on the Island.

A strike-lockout situation at major supermarkets on Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland is expected by late this week, following the breakdown of negotiations Monday between the bakers' union and the Food Industry Labor Relations Council.

The bakers' union has taken strike votes and served 72-hour strike notice at Weston's Bakeries and Mother Hubbard Bakeries on the Lower Mainland and is now awaiting strike permission from the union's international president, spokesman Hugh Comber said today.

Comber said another strike vote will be taken some time this week at Empress Foods Ltd. plant in Vancouver.

It is expected that strike action by the bakers at those three plants will precipitate a lockout of all of the major supermarkets and bakeries belonging to the food industry council.

Bill MacDonald, the council's chief negotiator, said he expected council members would retaliate with lockouts at other Vancouver Island and Lower Mainland stores and bakeries.

In Victoria, Canada Safeway stores and Weston's Sunbeam Bakery would be affected by the lockout.

Comber said today he hopes the strike permission will come by Friday.

Canada Safeway stores will probably be shut down completely, as meatcutters and retail clerks union members, who are also in negotiations with the food industry council, would respect picket lines set up by the locked out bakers.

The meatcutters, at meetings in Vancouver Sunday and on Vancouver Island Monday, have voted 90 per cent in favor of strike action, but have not yet served strike notice.

The bakers have asked for a $3.50-an-hour increase on the top rate of $6.80 an hour, while the council has offered an average $1.49-an-hour increase.

A total of 600 bakers are affected by the contract talks and a strike or lockout on the Lower Mainland would halt about 75 per cent of bread production. In Victoria the percentage would be much less as McDonald's Bakeries, although a subsidiary of McGavin Toastmaster which is a member of the food industry council, has a separate contract with its bakers which does not expire until November.

The food industry council represents Canada Safeway, Empress Foods, High Low Foods, H. Y. Louie, Independent Super Valu operators, Kelly Douglas, McGavin Toastmaster, Mrs. William's Baking, Overwaitea Stores, Strong's Market and Weston Bakeries.

BCPC Profit $94M

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald today announced a $94 million profit in the first full year of the British Columbia Petroleum Corporation operations, ending March 31, 1975.

Macdonald labelled it a Cinderella success story and said the figure compares very favorably with $41.9 million reported in assets for the corporation's five-month operation in 1974.

He said the majority of the revenue is cash and will be used to encourage oil exploration and development, "the weaker sister" of petroleum products.

Canadian Dollar Dipping

TORONTO — The exchange value of the Canadian dollar in relation to United States funds has dropped below 97 cents.

The closing spot price Monday in the inter-bank wholesale market was 96.84 cents, down from 97.24 cents the previous session. Last Monday, the dollar closed at 97.09 cents.

Since early May when the Canadian dollar reached 96.48, its lowest level in five years, the dollar has moved as high as 98 cents. It has been buoyed by the proceeds of debt issues by Canadian borrowers in the United States.

The U.S. dollar opened weaker on most European money markets today for the first time in 12 days. The price of gold rose in Zurich and fell in London.

Dealers could give no immediate reason for the setback in the U.S. dollar's strong run which has seen it gain on nearly all European markets since June 27.

JFK DEATH THEORY

ROME (UPI) — The Rome newspaper Il Messaggero said today the assassination of President John Kennedy was the work of 15 Cubans and Americans who felt he betrayed the anti-Castro cause by pledging not to invade Cuba.

Lucio Manisco, the newspaper's longtime New York correspondent, said he found evidence in favor of this theory through "a fortuitous series of circumstances, casual meetings in the United States and abroad and a more careful examination of documents not attached to the (Warren) report." He said some of his information was second-hand.

He said the New York Times, Washington Post and Los Angeles Times were working on the same story and that Sen. Frank Church (Dem.-Idaho) may ask the White House to reopen the inquiry.

Manisco said this version originated with Lawrence (Larry) Truckman, an "American adventurer" who was arrested in Manila in 1972 in connection with an assassination plot against President Ferdinand Marcos.

Manisco said Truckman was administered "truth serum" and under its effect told Filipino investigators of his role in the Kennedy assassination nine years earlier.

He said Kennedy was "the victim of a plot by 15 Cuban and American mercenaries, enlisted two years earlier by the Central Intelligence Agency for the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion."

The assassination was prompted by reports that Kennedy pledged to refrain from further invasion of Cuba in return for the withdrawal of Soviet missiles from the island, Manisco said. He said the group saw this as betrayal of the anti-Castro cause.

Israel-Egypt Pact Making Progress, But Not Complete

ACTION BY GANDHI URGED

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Officials of the ruling Congress party have urged Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to force the leaders of a rebellious southern state to abide by her tough emergency decrees.

Congress party officials in Tamil Nadu, India's southernmost state, called on Gandhi to use her "constitutional and administrative powers" to bring the local rulers "into line with the discipline of the emergency."

Travellers from Tamil Nadu said Monday the Liberal People's Progressive Party, running the state has refused to impose press censorship and round up political opponents of Gandhi.

Gandhi declared a state of emergency across India June 26, ordering strict censorship of the press as well as a severe crackdown against her critics.

The government, which has outlawed 26 militant political groups, has reported arresting 900 opposition leaders in the past 12 days. Opposition sources insist some 6,000 persons have been detained.

In New Delhi, about 200 demonstrators carrying flags of Gandhi's Congress party cried "Shame on the CIA" as they staged a sit-down protest today in front of the United States Information Service building.

The brief rally was the first anti-U.S. outburst since Gandhi imposed emergency rule on India June 26. One emergency decree bans public slogan-shouting or gatherings of more than four people.

Times News Services

TEL AVIV — An Israeli spokesman said today "certain progress has been achieved" towards and interim peace agreement with Egypt. But he firmly denied a British Broadcasting Corporation report that final agreement had been reached.

A government source said the reports of progress included "a concrete possibility" both sides would agree to setting up a U.S.-operated electronic early warning system between the two forces at the Gidi and Mitla passes in the Sinai Desert.

"The talks regarding an agreement with Egypt are still in a stage of questions and clarifications on central issues," the foreign ministry spokesman said.

"Although certain progress has been achieved in these clarifications, by no means can an agreement be seen as concluded — not theoretically and not practically."

He called the BBC report "incorrect both as a whole and in many of its specific details."

As to the passes, he said, "no lines have been drawn to determine just what points of the slopes will remain in Israeli hands."

Meanwhile, Yitzhak Rabin flew to West Germany today for the first official visit by an Israeli prime minister, another milestone in the reconciliation of the two countries whose relations still are darkened by the shadow of Hitler's holocaust.

But German officials said the chief topic in Rabin's talks with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and other officials would be the new Sinai withdrawal agreement U.S. Secretary Henry Kissinger is trying to promote and other Middle East developments.

German officials indicated that Schmidt, like Kissinger, would urge Rabin to accept the need for major Israeli concessions to make progress toward Middle East peace.

NEWS BRIEFS

IWA Strike Date

The 50,000 members of British Columbia's three forest unions will strike July 16 unless a contract settlement is reached before then. The strike deadline was set today by the International Woodworkers of America, the Pulp, Paper, Woodworkers of Canada and the Canadian Paperworkers Union.

Fog Stalls Ships

HALIFAX (CP) — Dense fog rolling along the Atlantic coast held up ships headed for 16 East Coast ports today where the transport department has insisted on good visibility during a strike by harbor pilots. A department spokesman said 17 ships in the area of the 16 strikebound ports were "holding" 12 miles off the coast waiting for weather to improve.

Ford in Race

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Gerald Ford, the only U.S. president who never ran for national office, today formally announced his candidacy to run in 1976 for a full term in the White House.

Nature's Shocking Show Zaps Esquimalt Home

By DEREK SIDENUS
Times Staff

As chief warrant officer of the electrical branch at CFB Esquimalt, John Voss has an interest in electricity. But he got more than he bargained for early today when he left his bed to observe a display of lightning.

As he spread the curtain to his second-storey bedroom window at 3:50 a.m., a bolt shattered out of the sky striking the gable to his home at 870 Phoenix in Esquimalt. He's certain it was 3:50 because the bolt stopped his watch dead.

The electrical blast also knocked a hole in the wall, smashed the window, and set the roof above the hole ablaze.

Voss, who had been sleeping with his wife Ethel in a bed near the window when the electrical storm began, went to telephone the Esquimalt fire department — but the phone was dead, too.

Firemen, summoned from a neighbor's phone, later estimated damage to the house at $2,500.

The Vosses were among scores of Southern Vancouver Islanders who witnessed the spectacular storm as it crashed through the night blowing out, a number of transformers, setting power poles alight and adding four new forest fires to 12 started in the area during Sunday's thunderstorm.

No one was injured but most residents passed a relatively sleepless night quaking under quilts or watching the rare display of atmospheric fireworks.

LEMON-OF-THE-YEAR ... WHAT A LOSER!

LONDON (Reuter) — A $7,750 car which needed three replacement engines, two gearboxes, two bell housings and new wiring during its first 6,000 miles has been named "worst new car of the year" by The Automobile Association of Britain.

The association's official magazine, Drive, conducted a survey of motorists' complaints to establish its Square Wheel Award for the worst new car of the year.

It chose for the unwelcome accolade a Rover 3500 made by British Leyland.

The car's owner, Robert Rouse, 54, said his first trouble started after only driving 23 miles. The car was off the road for repairs 114 days during the first 165 days of ownership.

Secret Soviet Grain Deal?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is taking steps to purchase large quantities of grain from Canada and the United States, two London newspapers report.

However, Otto Lang, cabinet minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, declined comment and U.S. spokesmen for the agriculture department and major grain firms said they were unable to confirm that large Russian purchases are in the offing.

The London Times and The Financial Times say the Russians are trying to keep the purchases secret by negotiating through third parties to ships to carry the grain to Soviet ports.

The London Times says drought in the Soviet Union has led the Russians to look up to three million metric tons of grain from Canada and to make provisional bookings with shippers for up to seven million metric tons from the U.S.

Richard Bell, a U.S. deputy assistant agriculture secretary, said:

"We are aware that the Soviets are chartering vessels for shipment of grain from North America to the Baltic Sea and Black Sea."

However, he noted that U.S.

exporters need not report sales of 100,000 tons or more until 24 hours after the deal is concluded.

He said lack of rainfall has affected spring wheat production in parts of the Soviet Union, and a bumper wheat crop is forecast for the U.S.

The reports of Soviet grain purchases are circulating on the third anniversary of a credit deal that helped Moscow buy huge amounts of American grain.

On July 8, 1972, President Richard Nixon announced a $750-million credit arrangement. Although the loan, financed through the agriculture department, was thought then to meet Russia's needs for wheat and feed grains, it turned out to be only the tip of an export iceberg.

Within a month, it was disclosed that the Soviets had secretly negotiated large cash purchases of U.S. grain, mainly wheat, amounting to more than $1 billion.

Those transactions led to soaring U.S. grain prices. That in turn led to higher domestic beef prices.

USDA officials said the Russians did not use all the $750-million line of credit provided three years ago. Under terms of the agreement, the time for using the remaining credit expires today.

Peron Abandons 50% Wage Curb

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — President Isabel Peron of Argentina has agreed to scrap her 50-per-cent ceiling on wage increases to appease the striking labor wing of the Peronist movement. But she continues to reject the union leaders' demand for the ouster of Jose Lopez Rega, her closest adviser, informed sources reported today.

The sources said Peron offered to replace some of her eight cabinet ministers. It was believed that she and Lopez Rega were prepared to sacrifice Economy Minister Celestino Rodrigo.

Rodrigo is the administrator of the government austerity plan which has resulted in a month of strikes, other protests and intensified political pressure on the president to get rid of Lopez Rega.

Leaders of the General Labor Confederation CGT who paralyzed Argentina Monday with a general strike scheduled a meeting today to consider Peron's offer. A communiqué indicated they would accept it.

But as long as the conservative Lopez Rega continues to be Peron's closest adviser and the virtual prime minister of her regime, a permanent reconciliation is not likely.

Everybody Trusts Trashman!

BOSTON (UPI) — The American public has more faith in garbage collectors than it does in the members of any other profession, according to pollster Lou Harris.

Harris, in an address to the U.S. Conference of Mayors, said Monday the public gave a 51 per cent "high confidence" rating to trash collectors, he said that was a reflection of the "demoralization" of the U.S. public.

"When we asked people why they felt that way, they gave a straightforward answer: 'Well at least we know whether or not they take away the trash and keep our streets clean,'" Harris said. Harris said his latest polls show America had reached "record peaks of demoralization" with 58 per cent of the public feeling "people with power are out to take advantage."

In 1966, that attitude was held by only 33 per cent of the public.

In 1966, 72 per cent of the population said they had a "great deal" of confidence in doctors.

It dropped to 45 per cent this year. Other professions didn't fare nearly as well as the garbage men.

The confidence factor dropped in the areas of:

higher education, 33 per cent, down from 61 per cent; the military, from 62 to 29 per cent; the press from 21 to 16 per cent; organized labor, from 22 to 14 per cent; business from 53 to 18 per cent; congress from 42 to 13 per cent; the executive branch from 43 to 13 per cent; state government from 44 to 16 per cent; and local government leaders, from 43 to 14 per cent.

Nothing Could Be Done . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — Police said Monday there was little that 30 bystanders could have done to save the life of a 24-year-old Ottawa man who drowned Sunday while swimming in the Ottawa River.

Eli Georges About-Assili died Sunday afternoon when he was caught in a swift current while swimming to an island at the foot of Parkdale Avenue in the city's west end. The swimming area is unsupervised.

"The only one who could have helped would have been someone with a boat," said Inspector John McCombie of the Ottawa police underwater squad.

The inspector, who arrived shortly after the incident, said "he was too far from shore for anyone to go in and help."

"That sounds pretty sensational — 30 people standing around while somebody drowns — but there was no way anyone could have gotten to him."

A friend of the drowned man, Dmad Nasreddine, said Sunday that he ran frantically along the river bank begging people to save his friend when he became caught in the current.

U.K. Health Plan 'Near Collapse'

LONDON (AP) — Britain's state-run National Health Service, once vaunted as the world's best socialized medical-care system, is near collapse and only a large cash transfusion can save it, doctors said Monday.

But Prime Minister Harold Wilson's Labor government, battling the country's gravest economic crisis since the Second World War, said there is no money to spare.

More than 200 doctors from London's St. Thomas' Hospital, one of the city's biggest health centres, predicted in a letter to The Times that the NHS will collapse "in the near future unless the community pays more for its health care."

They said "inadequate financing of the NHS is leading to a state of crisis."

The NHS was founded in 1948 as the embodiment of the socialist ideal of free medical care for rich and poor. It is ostensibly free for everyone and provides almost every kind of treatment.

But it has been lurching deeper into financial trouble for years.

Eighty-five per cent of its money comes from general taxation, but successive governments have been reluctant to impose higher taxes to bail it out.

The British Medical Association which represents 25,000 doctors, launched its annual congress Monday with a renewed campaign to persuade the government that it must find the badly needed cash to save the NHS.

NAVY DIVERS FIND PLANE

COMOX (CP) — Divers from Esquimalt have located the wreckage of a Voodoo jet fighter that crashed Thursday in Kye Bay, north of the Canadian Forces base here.

A barge and tug equipped with a crane will attempt to salvage the jet today.

The pilot, Captain W. G. Macintosh of Ottawa, and the navigator, Captain E. D. Campbell of Abbotsford, both ejected safely when the craft went down.

A military investigation is under way but the results won't be made public.

42 Arrested After Saigon Police Raids

SAIGON (UPI) — Authorities have arrested at least 42 former soldiers and police officers including four intelligence agents for failure to obey new laws, the official newspaper said today.

The Saigon liberation daily said most of those taken into custody had refused to report for re-education classes now underway for former soldiers and other employees of the former regime in South Vietnam.

The newspaper said however, at least two men were captured with weapons and were allegedly planning to fight the new government.

Although the story did not make it clear, it appeared the four arrested agents were employees of the former Saigon government's intelligence agency which had close links to the Central Intelligence Agency.

There has been no public mention thus far of alleged CIA agents left behind in Saigon although government officials have told UPI in conversation they feel the agency left underground workers behind to harass the new authorities.

Most of the men listed in the Saigon liberation daily were former officers of the South Vietnamese army which collapsed April 30. The most common reason for their arrest was failing to report for the re-education courses.

A former private and a navy officer were picked up with weapons and the newspaper said they were plotting to fight the revolutionary authorities now in power.

A third man, a former army lieutenant, allegedly was involved in a plot to smuggle former officers to the jungle to avoid having to report to the new government.

The newspaper said he had already sent five men out of Saigon charging fees of up to $7,000 each.

Others were charged with "opposing the revolution" in other forms.

Drugs Cited in Breakdown of Prisons

BURNABY (CP) — Members of the news media Monday took a promised tour of the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre, also known as Oakalla, the scene of two recent sit-in protests by prisoners.

The tour was promised to about 130 prisoners last week after they were given a 15-minute ultimatum to end a 21-hour protest on the prison recreation field. Their demonstration was a bid for reform at the maximum-security provincial institution.

Escorting guards answered all questions, pictures were taken of prisoners with their approval and visitors were allowed to talk with prisoners.

Part of the tour included the isolation section while the prison hospital, the women's section, various cell areas and the administration section were also open to the visitors.

One of the prison matrons, who wished to remain anonymous, said drugs have played a role in the breakdown of the prison system.

"There used to be a keen interest in education and learning skills," she said. "This began to change when the soft drugs era came in. The interest has all but gone."

"At least 80 per cent of our girls are drug addicts. I've heard them say they've left their drug habit on the fence when they come in and will pick it up when they leave. It's the life many of them want to live."

Prisoners no longer tend the farmland within the Oakalla fences, a fact one guard said has hurt morale among the prisoners.

"These men have nothing to do," he said. "That is a large part of their trouble."

The Farris inquiry, meanwhile, resumed sitting behind closed doors Monday and a spokesman indicated it will continue to do so for the rest of the week.

Inquiry counsel John Rown said it's possible the hearings will be opened to the public and the news media at times this week, but this would be on administrative matters and likely would occur only briefly.

In its closed sessions the inquiry is hearing testimony from some of the hostages who were held captive in a British Columbia Penitentiary office filing vault by three prisoners — Andy Bruce, 26; Dwight Douglas Lucas, 20; and Claire Wilson, 26 — from 8 a.m. June 9 to 1 a.m. June 11.

Concorde Shatter's Time In London to Bahrain

LONDON (UPI) — The Anglo-French Concorde supersonic airliner has made its first passenger flight from London to Bahrain in slightly more than half the time of a regular jet.

Monday's flight of the $50 million dart-shaped plane was delayed by an hour at London because of a stuck pin in the tow bar of the tractor used to move the Concorde from its stand.

An engineer with a mallet solved the minor hitch, freeing the plane to make its 3,515-mile flight in three hours and 49 minutes, hitting a speed of 1,550 miles per hour. The Concorde followed a route it will take to Bahrain when British Airways begins scheduled commercial operations in January.

Closer Bonds Between Israel And S. Africa

CAPE TOWN (WP) — Senior Israeli military officers visit South Africa regularly to lecture South African officers on modern warfare and counterinsurgency techniques.

This is one of several important military and industrial links that have been established between Israel and South Africa.

Two other projects are participation by the state-owned South African Railways in construction of a railway in Israel, and construction of an Israel plant in South Africa to desalinate seawater for drinking and irrigation purposes.

Confirmation of these two projects was given in Johannesburg Monday by Gen. Meir Amit, formerly Israel's intelligence chief and currently head of the giant Koor Industries, who is on his second business and lecture tour of South Africa.

He left for Nigeria Monday. When it was put to Amit in an interview Monday night, apart from major industrial projects Israel and South Africa enjoyed good military relations, he replied, "That is an understatement."

Referring to the rail and desalination projects, Amit said, "The finer points of the scheme are still being discussed at top government level. There are also security and political considerations against publicizing the full details at this time."

The Rand Daily Mail of Johannesburg claims that the new railroad in Israel "will under certain circumstances be advantageous" to South Africa as well as to Israel.

Koor Industries comprises 150 independent companies, 75 of them major manufacturers, and has links with ISCOR (the state-owned Iron and Steel Corp. in South Africa) and five other major South African industrial concerns.

Amit disclosed that a joint Israeli-South African venture in the manufacture of agricultural chemicals, including insecticides, would come into operation in Cape Province next year.

The factory already is being built.

Amit disclosed further that a tank farm for the storage of oil under tight security conditions is being built in Israel and that this is a "partnership venture" with South Africa.

The oil tank units, made by a South African company are being assembled in Israel, he said.

According to a report from London, a $2.3 million collection of valuable oil books about South Africa has been offered to an Israeli university on condition that it establish a chair for Afrikaans studies.

Yaacov Aviel, an Israeli-born fine arts dealer based in Europe, said he would gladly exchange his Afrikaans collection for a guarantee that an Israeli university would establish a department devoted to the promotion of closer historical cultural and political relations between Israelis and Afrikaansers.

HELICOPTER WASN'T SHOT DOWN: FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) — An FBI spokesman said today there is no indication any shots were fired at an FBI helicopter which crash-landed on the Pine Ridge Indian reserve in South Dakota last Friday while taking part in a search operation.

"At first it was thought it had been shot down," an FBI spokesman said Tuesday.

However, he said an examination of the helicopter and interviews with the crew turned up no evidence of gunfire, and the FBI believes the accident was caused by mechanical failure.

No one was killed in the crash.

AVOID SUMMER SHOWERS WITH PRESTONE II

PRESTONE II is more than a great anti-freeze. It's a great coolant, too.

And that's something your cooling system needs in summer. To beat the heat generated by hotter running engines, automatic transmissions, power equipment, air conditioners, hot weather and traffic conditions.

Mixed 50/50 with the water in your cooling system, PRESTONE II will keep the lid on things. It raises the boiling point of water, and reduces the chances of boil-over.

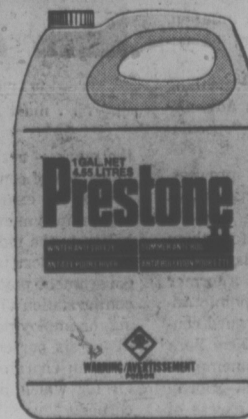

PRESTONE II's patented Silicone/Silicate formula also inhibits rust and sediment build-up. So your cooling system can cool, instead of clog.

Install PRESTONE II now and avoid summer showers.

And now you can do it yourself! The new PRESTONE Flush & Fill Kit lets you back-flush your cooling system as well as the pros do, with just your garden hose, and install PRESTONE II in minutes. Look for this kit wherever PRESTONE II Anti-freeze and Summer Coolant is displayed.

"Prestone II" keeps you out of hot water.

NDP Caution at the Crossroads

A curious ho-hum quality accompanied the announcement of Ed Broadbent's election as New Democratic Party leader Monday. Even though it took four ballots to achieve his victory the eventual result was as predictable as the party's stand on corporate profits. The competent 39-year-old NDP house leader was a virtual shoo-in because he was backed by the party's big guns — at least two provincial premiers plus the trade union movement. In other words, the conservative elements within the NDP. With the exception of Rosemary Brown, the other candidates appeared to be differently packaged echoes of Broadbent.

Brown is a special case. She offered the party a new direction, more in keeping with NDP philosophy as opposed to its more pragmatic manifestations in power. That she placed second on the final ballot, a mere 250 votes behind Broadbent, is testament to pressures within the party. Yet Jim Laxer of Waffle movement fame also received hundreds of votes when the party reaffirmed David Lewis and expunged the Wafflers in recent years. It is almost as if the NDP must assuage its conscience by always giving second place to uncompromising ideologues. Like its Liberal and Conservative counterparts, the federal NDP has become a cautious establishment party, only slightly to the left of the rhetoric shouted by its big brothers. If this seems sad, it was inevitable.

Since the old days when J. S. Woodsworth stumped the prairie steppes for the CCF, the party has watched its ideas washed away and homogenized by Liberals and Conservatives. Like its prairie birthplace the party was always "next year country." Next year, next year, next decade the people of Canada would elect a democratic socialist government. Of course, it hasn't happened yet. In fact, the party can hardly be heralded as a national party, in the true sense of the word, with only one member east of the Ontario border. Five of the 10 provinces are without NDP representatives in Ottawa.

Caution has been the NDP's handmaiden since the fifties when McCarthyism overflowed into Canada. The party slowly recovered in the sixties only to see its parliamentary strength plummet from 31 to 16 after the 1974 federal election, following David Lewis' odd flirtation with the minority Trudeau government. Now, the party has opted for another cautious leader, a man with strong ties to the trade union movement. It is almost ironic for the party to elect a man who has support of the conservative trade union movement at a time when organized labor has as many excesses as the corporations the party is so fond of drubbing.

Still, Ed Broadbent has proven himself an able parliamentarian and a good political tactician. Whether he will improve his party's standings probably depends as much on external factors as his leadership. With only 16 members in the 264-seat House of Commons quality rather than quantity will have to be an NDP hallmark. In this respect the anointed leader has his work cut out for him as the Tories move to the centre of the opposition stage. Exercising the caution of a long-time loser, the party exudes a feeling of blandness, more bland perhaps than the electorate it is trying to seduce.

Giving In to Prisoner Demands

While the decision by the provincial government to do away with isolation cells at Oakalla Prison was praiseworthy, the timing of the announcement was not.

A statement that the solitary confinement cells would be closed came immediately following a 21-hour sit-in by inmates at Oakalla and closure of the cells had been a major demand of the prisoners.

The announcement by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald had the appearance of capitulation to the demands of the prisoners who had defied prison authority by refusing to return to their cells.

There is no doubt that such easy victories by the inmates only encourage further demonstrations. Indeed, only hours after the decision was announced, the Oakalla inmates were off on another adventure, a late-evening sit-in.

Nothing encourages unlawful behavior as much as rewarding it. If authority continues to reward violent acts, it encourages other desperate men to follow the example. Once a pattern of capitulation is established, it is difficult to stem the tide.

We agree that Macdonald has made a correct decision in ordering the closure of the isolation cells. A similar room at the British Columbia Penitentiary has been called "inhuman" by Chief Justice John Farris who inspected the facility.

But if the NDP government has been against the use of this type of treatment, why has it taken so long to act? This government took office on Sept. 15, 1972, and the isolation cell in Oakalla has been in constant use since that date.

It took a peaceful but defiant demonstration by 130 prisoners to get action from the provincial government.

Hopefully, the attorney-general will continue his investigation into prison treatment and not wait for the next demonstration to be spurred into action. Prison reform should be an on-going process and not a sporadic response to organized intimidation from prison inmates.

U.S. Ignores Main Problem

NEW YORK — By careful count, President Ford seized six separate opportunities at his last news conference to express his concern about inflation.

He made one vague reference to his optimism about generating more employment and another to his hope that unemployment might not be as high next year as his own advisers have forecast.

He left no doubt whatever that his only policy is to hold down inflation and that those without jobs or hope of jobs are out of luck, as far as he's concerned.

When asked, for example, about his adviser's prediction that unemployment could not be reduced to five per cent until 1980, he termed that an "unacceptable" figure without giving the slightest explanation why he had nevertheless accepted it, and added:

"I can only point out that six months or a year ago some of my advisers were telling me that inflation in 1975 would be 8 or 9 per cent. It's down to 6 per cent. So I think we can hopefully expect the same kind of improvement over the speculation in unemployment that we had in forecasting inflation."

Muddled Response

What kind of nincompoop Administration does the U.S. have, to get such a muddled response? Ford's Council of Economic Advisers and budget officials, he says, are only engaging in "speculation" about unemployment. And since they were wrong once, on inflation, maybe they'll be wrong again, on unemployment.

"Hopefully", therefore, everything will turn out all right if only his Administration is wrong enough in its "speculation."

Whatever their forecasting prowess, his advisers and Ford are being callous and myopic in their insistence that the only real economic problem before them is avoiding another round of inflation.

Walter Heller, an economist, a former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, and a Democrat, has argued convincingly in an article for The New York Times that by comparison to unemployment, inflation really is a low-priority problem — with supply far in excess of demand, wages at reasonable levels, and the effects of recent external shocks, such as food and oil price increases and dollar devaluation, mostly absorbed.

Heller pointed out, moreover, that even a year of "robust recovery" at 8 per cent economic growth (as compared to the Administration's projected 6 per cent) would leave unemployment above 7 per cent, plenty of excess production capacity, declines in both inflation and the federal budget deficit and interest rates at moderate levels.

Nor is Heller the only economist who believes this Administration is missing the effects of recent external shocks, such as food and oil price increases and dollar devaluation, mostly absorbed.

Herrington J. Bryce of the Joint Centre of Political Studies has provided graphic detail about the meaning of black teen-age unemployment — which has always been intolerably high, at 24 per cent, for example, in 1969 when unemployment generally was only 3.5 per cent. About one-fourth of black teen-agers seeking jobs have been unable to find them in any year since the 1957-58 recession.

Black Crime Rate

According to Bryce, such unemployment is far more consequential in the black community than it would be in the white, since black teen-agers contribute significantly to the income of families, particularly the 64 per cent of poor black families headed by a female just over $600 a year — about a tenth of the income of the average black family, and a critical proportion of the meager earnings of poor black families. Of the latter, in fact, a fifth have more than one wage-earner, and in most cases the "other" wage-earner is a teen-ager.

While Bryce confines himself to such statistics, mayors and police chiefs everywhere could testify that teen-age unemployment, particularly at the rate it occurs among blacks, carries with it great potential for violence, unrest and crime.

Black teen-agers, moreover, are leaving the work force by the thousands — the number doubled between 1973 and 1974 alone — and they are not even counted as unemployed.

A President who cannot see the disastrous potential of this gathering army of the permanently unemployed really does offer the country nothing better than the hope that his figures are wrong.

WALTER HELLER

the mark — not even seeing the mark — in its lack of concern for unemployment.

Just for example, every one per cent of unemployment is estimated to add $16 billion in lost tax revenues, $2 billion in government payments for unemployment compensation and other benefits. Allowing unemployment to remain for years above six per cent, as Ford plans to do, piles an enormous burden upon the deficit for which he is supposedly so concerned.

Perhaps more important are the so-

War Boundaries Recognized

WASHINGTON — Thirty years after the Second World War, leaders of the West and the Communist bloc are finally close to signing a peace treaty that will indelibly etch the postwar map of Europe.

That is the symbolic importance of a document that is to be signed at Helsinki sometime this year after 2½ years of negotiations among 35 nations, including Canada, at the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe (CSCE).

Diplomats are still arguing over the final clauses of the document that will emerge from CSCE — indeed, they are undecided whether it will be called a document, statement or resolution — but the end of their history-making discussions is in sight.

Summit Meeting

The Soviet Union, which suggested CSCE in the first place, is pressing for a summit of national leaders in late July to endorse the document. But loose ends would have to be tied up quickly for agreement on the July 28 date currently being put forward by Moscow, because of the elaborate travel and protocol arrangements that will have to be made.

If CSCE cannot be closed by the end of July, it might have to wait until autumn. European officials traditionally go on vacation in August, regardless of what is happening in the world, and a special session of the United Nations on a so-called "new economic order" will keep many of them preoccupied in September.

The CSCE document, in addition to formalizing the postwar frontiers between Western Europe and the Communist bloc, is aimed at relaxing the tensions that have dominated European politics throughout most of the three decades since 1945.

To be sure, the document will be full of declarations of good will. But what it will actually have accomplished — not much, a little or a lot — depends, in the words of one American official, "on which government you work for."

In the parlance of diplomats at the conference, the major issues have been lumped into three "baskets."

The first of these deals with political and security questions, such as the inviolability of borders by force and prior notification of large military exercises. The second "basket" will outline broad measures for economic and scientific co-operation, while the third "basket" will deal with so-called humanitarian considerations — primarily Western demands for freer information and travel in Eastern Europe.

The substantive CSCE negotiations have been going on in Geneva for the past two years, originally at a snail's pace although discussions have been more productive in recent months. The talks moved there from Helsinki, after a meeting of foreign ministers in July, 1973, endorsed six months of preliminary negotiations in the Finnish capital.

The conference is the result of a long Soviet diplomatic campaign. When CSCE got underway, a common American attitude was that Moscow wanted to polish its rusty Iron Curtain, obtain Western endorsement of its grip over Eastern Europe, while opening up new opportunities to assert Soviet influence over Western Europe.

The United States, according to officials here, still views the tentative accomplishments of CSCE with restraint. But they see it as the beginning of a longer process and a reflection of the evolution in East-West relations.

Most of the NATO allies apparently feel much the same way, although Canada — in particular — is enthusiastic about achievements in "basket three."

"CSCE should allow freer access to information in Eastern European countries, and lead to easier contact between family members living in the West and Eastern European Countries," said an official in Ottawa during a recent interview.

He noted that Canada has been particularly active in pushing for "basket three" concessions because of its large immigrant population.

Equally important to Ottawa, the 35-nation conference has permitted Canada to speak as a North American voice independent of the United States. This is in line with Canada's diplomatic objective of asserting its independence of the U.S.

by forming closer links with Europe.

Most enthusiastic about CSCE are some of the neutral Western countries, such as Austria and Sweden, and such Eastern countries as Rumania and Yugoslavia — wary of control from Moscow.

The Russians have not commented publicly about CSCE, but will undoubtedly proclaim the conference as a triumph for chairman Brezhnev's policy of détente. The borders of Eastern Europe have already been endorsed by West Germany's Ostpolitik, but it is another thing to have those borders formally endorsed by 35 countries, including the United States.

U.S. officials note that the document to be signed at Helsinki will consist of a declaration of 10 principles. The unanswered question, of course, is the spirit in which those principles — whether dealing with freer flow of information in Eastern Europe or the security of national borders — will be interpreted.

Love of Peace

This interpretation hinges, to a significant extent, on what will follow CSCE.

Originally, the Russians wanted some sort of permanent institution. But they have gradually backed away from the idea. Rather than being a propaganda forum for the Soviet love of peace, Moscow now foresees that such an organization could conduct awkward inquiries into Soviet implementation of its commitments, especially those involving human issues.

It is the neutral countries and Soviet satellites such as Rumania that now want to provide for future meetings.

According to American officials here, the Western allies are undecided about what to do. It would be nice to have a forum where they could chide Moscow for failing to live up to its commitments, but they are wary to offer the Soviets a new opportunity to comment on Western developments.

Undoubtedly there will be a compromise on this issue, which reflects pointedly both the changes in East-West relations and how firmly the basic conflicts remain.

Max Lauded

I couldn't agree with Jack Scott more, in his Monday column about Max Low's writing.

I too enjoy his writing. He writes about interesting people, not necessarily famous ones. I feel that makes the difference.

It took "guts" to say what he did about Bobby Riggs but it sure was true. People like the truth. — Bette Morrison, 1605 Douglas Wouldn't all Conservatives and Liberals prefer to work under a Liberal-Conservative government (headed by Dr. Scott Wallace) than under a government run by either Mr. Barrett or Mr. Bennett? Personally, I would: does anyone else want to join me? — Concerned Voter.

Ancestor Hunter

I am writing a book "How to trace your ancestors in Canada" and would much appreciate the co-operation of your readers.

The Registration of births, marriages and deaths has been compulsory in the various provinces or territories since the period 1850-1880, but before that the ancestor hunter has to depend on church records. These are widely scattered — some in the national or provincial archives, some in local churches, some in local libraries, and some even in private hands. There is no central record of these locations and so, if any of your readers have knowledge of the whereabouts of church registers prior to 1880 I would be happy to hear from them.

I would also like to know about the location of old graveyards and burial grounds which were in use before the above date.

If any of your readers can send me information on the above subjects I will be very grateful.—Angus Baxter, P.O. Box 655, Lakefield, Ontario.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of July 9, 1915

LONDON — Giving judgment in the board of trade inquiry into the sinking of the African liner Falaba in St. George's Channel on March 28 with the loss of 111 lives, Lord Mersey ruled that the ship had been sunk by a torpedo from a German submarine, that life-saving measures had been carried out and that proper discipline had been maintained. He added that the submarine had made no effort to save life and probably could not do so without endangering itself. He was satisfied that the witnesses who had described the lifeboats as rotten were mistaken and that the damage to some of the boats sustained on launching them was not the fault of the Falaba's officers or men.

U.S. History Not All Moonlight and Roses

By MARGOT HORNBLOWER

WASHINGTON — "Give me liberty or give me death," Valley Forge. "The shot heard 'round the world." Paul Revere. "One if by land, two if by sea." Washington crossing the Delaware. "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness," Betsy Ross.

One hundred and ninety-nine years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence the mythology of the American Revolution has a strong hold on the minds of most Americans. Since the restaging of the Boston Tea Party in December, 1973, national leaders, city governments, private corporations, local organizations and individuals have been invoking the heroes, great deeds and patriotic legends of the American Revolution in commemoration of the nation's 200th anniversary.

The American public gets "a moonlight and roses version of the past," says Jack P. Greene, who teaches colonial history at Johns Hopkins University. "You walk through a pleasant museum in Williamsburg, and the image created is one of a simple time when good was good and evil was evil."

"In fact, it was a time when life was very crude, and there was an extraordinary amount of meanness. There was considerable political contention and some social contention, too."

Dissent is often left out of the contemporary view of the revolution, says Gary B. Nash, a colonial historian at the University of California. "In fact, there were tremendous struggles in the patriot camp from beginning to end. There were many differing revolutions in the heads of different kinds of people."

Indians Struggling

"Indians, for example, struggled for the same things white Americans did: political freedom, preservation of their land, cultural autonomy. They fought a revolution, too — but mostly against the Americans. You don't see any of that diversity and complexity reflected in the Bicentennial."

The question that needs to be asked about the American Revolution is "so what?" says Richard B. Morris, who teaches colonial history at Columbia University. "We have to go back and find out what our first principles were, to what extent we find them relevant to the present, to what extent we've had to modify them."

"The Founding Fathers made a series of commitments which made this a continuing revolution. The word that is really missing from the Bicentennial is 'revolution' (the government) seems to be terrified by the thought that the United States is a revolutionary country."

Morris, 70, is a leading authority on the American Revolution. He has written or contributed to about 40 books and edits the Encyclopedia of American History. Nash, 42, is one of the more prominent "New Historians," who concentrate on the history of ordinary people rather than famous leaders and events. Greene, 43, has written a dozen books on colonial history and will be a visiting professor at Oxford this year.

None of them would propose eliminating the Fourth of July fireworks, community picnics and band concerts during the Bicentennial. But they and their fellow historians want something more. They want to use the past to understand — and even to improve — the present.

Started Out Racist

"The Bicentennial might be the time for taking stock," Greene says. "This is far from a perfect society, although we have come somewhat closer in the last two decades to fulfilling some of the promises of the Declaration of Independence, such as 'all men are created equal.'"

"We started out as an extraordinarily racist society. It is remarkable that this has become a progressively more inclusive society."

"Perhaps the most useful thing which could come out of the Bicentennial is a comparison, not of the American Revolution and contemporary politics, but of 18th century American society and contemporary American society."

"The American character was shaped during the 18th and early 19th century, when there was unlimited space, lots of opportunity and an abundant food supply."

"Doing your 'thing' is not some invention of the hippies. It is an old American demand."

"For a long time, at least since the First World War, we've lived in a much more complex world. There is less space, and resources are scarcer. In order to survive, we're going to have to accept certain restrictions, for example on the consumption of fuel or on the right to bear arms."

"There isn't the space now for the old unlimited, unrestrained individualism. The common good has to be redefined. It is clearly something larger than the sum of individual happiness."

The American Revolution is different things to different historians. For some it was a political and ideological event in which British colonials became Americans without changing the social and economic structure of society.

For others it was a profoundly social and economic movement, like the French Revolution, in which the haves-nots took power and property from the haves.

These views are reflected in the way various Bicentennial groups choose to commemorate the revolution.

The Boston Massacre, 1770

The American Revolution Bicentennial Administration, the federal government agency, emphasizes the milder version of an American war for independence that set forth important political and philosophical principles.

The Peoples Bicentennial Commission, a non-profit, Washington-based group, focuses on social unrest during the 1770s and calls for a redistribution of wealth to overthrow today's Tories, the large corporations.

Routine Changes

"I don't think that it's been demonstrated by anybody that the American Revolution had powerful social causes or powerful social results," Greene says. "There were some social changes that went on during the revolution, but they were the sort of incremental changes that had been going on in American society from the beginning. Some of them were accelerated, but they would have occurred anyway."

Morris disagrees: "The American Revolution was touched off by ideological and constitutional issues. But when you start a revolution, you start up a lot of other things which you can't expect."

"It established nationhood and the republican system that laid the groundwork for democracy. It established the principle of anti-colonialism and affirmed the principle of equality. Constitutionalism, federalism, republicanism, anti-colonialism, egalitarianism — those are the things for which the revolution stands."

"It reminds me of World War I. We thought we fought World War I because of Germany's interference with American commerce. But actually World War I was a great period for women's liberation, women got out of the home and into the factory. It was the culmination of the women's suffrage movement."

"We didn't fight World War I to liberate women, but it was our first almost total war with universal conscription, so there was a great manpower shortage. Women were the beneficiaries of that."

"To some extent this is what we had in the American Revolution. You involved yourself in a long war, and it had profound social and economic consequences."

Male Chauvinists?

"It is possible to find all kinds of things in the Revolution," Greene says. "It's a very complex movement and, in a way, there were as many different revolutions as there were people who were in them. It's very hard to say something totally untrue about the Revolution. What you really are doing is making judgments about what is more true, most true."

"People say the founding fathers were committed to the phrase 'all men are created equal.' On the other hand, I could say this is nonsense — all they were talking about were white adult property-owning males. You could make the point they were really racist, male-chauvinist pigs."

"But on the other hand, it is true that they did enunciate a principle, which has changed over time to mean 'all men are created equal,' meaning all mankind."

Nobody Listened

Nash, who focuses primarily on colonial social history and on the unrest among blacks, Indians and lower-class groups, does not see the Revolution as an economic and social one. "There might be the beginnings of some very real social changes," he says, "but in the end there was a drawing back from that."

"For example, at the beginning of the Revolution you begin to hear very strong attacks against slavery. Quakers had been protesting it for years, and nobody was listening to them. But starting in 1765 a lot of people began to say, 'we can't call the British tyrants when we're tyrannizing 20 per cent of our population.'"

Important leaders advocated abolition and published pamphlets about it. A number of legislatures began to abolish slavery. But in the end, when it got down to the hard business of actually freeing the slaves, people drew back. Only very limited measures were taken, primarily in the North. It could have been a very important social revolution, but it aborted."

"Another example might be the rise of the laboring people in politics during the revolutionary era. The gentry pretty much ruled political society, but during the Revolution there was a dramatic enlargement in the voice of artisans. They demanded that the vote be given to every adult free male, not just those who owned property, and that office be held not just by lawyers and landed people, but by ordinary people as well."

"In Philadelphia during 1779 there was wartime inflation. The Continental Congress was running the printing press, turning out paper money to finance the war. A pair of shoes cost $300, a loaf of bread $15."

"Merchants engaged in war profiteering and government contracts. While the poor are in the army getting shot at, the rich don't fight. So the artisans take over the city and demand that merchants lower prices. They drag shopkeepers out of their shops and a couple of people get killed."

"This is duplicated all over the colonies. In Boston women haul patriot merchants out of their houses and dump them headfirst into carts of dung for overcharging. The Revolution aroused a tremendous amount of political passion."

But the American Revolution cannot be fitted into the model of the French Revolution, nor can it be compared to the Revolutions of underdeveloped nations, according to Morris and Greene.

The American colonies had extraordinary experience in self-government through their legislatures, which nurtured exceptional leaders.

The social inequalities in the colonies were not nearly so great as in France, where there was a legally privileged aristocracy. Unlike the underdeveloped countries of Africa, for example, America at the time of the Revolution was a relatively literate, wealthy country, with a long tradition of constitutional rule from Britain.

The unique circumstances of the American Revolution explain to some extent the United States' ambivalence toward revolutions in other countries, says Morris, who sees the 200th anniversary as a time to examine fundamental foreign-policy issues in an historic context.

"We were the first anti-colonial revolution in history, but you're not getting that from the Bicentennial."

"We were at one time committed to anti-colonialism. Whether we believe in it for other peoples now is something we have to think about. The Bicentennial could be used to correct the erroneous image abroad of the United States as a capitalist, colonial, imperialist power . . ."

Economic Controls

"What makes it so complicated is that the American dream has been tied over the course of time to individual enterprise and the capitalist system. So that anybody who favors some type of collectivism is apparently opposed to the American way, and we associate that somehow with the American Revolution."

"It's true that the founding fathers believed in private property, but at the same time they introduced all sorts of government controls. Jefferson was very careful to leave the word 'property' out of the Declaration of Independence . . . 'So we might show a greater tolerance toward other systems which are not necessarily pursuing the same economic ends, that we developed over the course of the 19th century.'"

These are the kinds of questions Morris would like to see discussed during the Bicentennial, but it is debatable whether this kind of intellectual, issue-oriented approach has popular appeal. In this do-it-yourself Bicentennial, which the federal government has left up to States, and which the States have largely left up to individual communities, most of the projects devised so far are festive rather than philosophical.

Just Another Exercise in Elitism

OTTAWA — In almost any context, $500 million is a lot of money. This is a short, incomplete and unsatisfactory story about a specific half-billion dollars that merited a special "discussion paper" in the budget presentations last month.

The paper's title is The Tax Treatment of Charities. In about 4,000 words and with a couple of diagrams Finance Minister John Turner tells us that the government wants a "public discussion" of proposed changes in the Income Tax Act dealing with the taxation of charities.

"Concerned Canadians" are to respond by sending their views in writing to "charities study group, Department of Finance, 160 Elgin St., Ottawa, K1A 0G5" no later than September 30.

Mr. Turner suggests in the paper some proposals to change the act to block loopholes until there's a public discussion and those of us who are "concerned" have a chance to make our views known to the department.

This sounds like good, familiar Trudeauistic "democracy." After some investigation, however, I wonder how informed the "public discussion" will be. Invitations to public participation sound good but if the public hasn't much data it won't know what to discuss.

I'm a citizen who is interested in the subject (a) as one solicited for charitable donations; (b) as someone active in several voluntary organizations which are registered with national revenue and have the right to issue receipts worth a tax deduction and (c) as someone who wants volunteerism encouraged with as much organized activity in the Canadian community as possible kept outside of both government and private business.

The paper informs us that there are 35,000 registered charities in Canada.

Their annual average "take" seems to work out to less than $15,000.

The register is kept with national revenues in a section that has 29 employees, including clerks.

Over at Statistics Canada, a small group of four employees had done some analysis of national revenue data on charities for the years 1971, 1972 and 1973.

About 25,000 of the 35,000 charities are religious. The latter includes individual churches and parishes. Another group of about 3,500 are really general fund-raising corporations which distribute funds to operational charities.

The bag of charities runs across educational, health, ethnic, welfare, community and service club organizations, musical endeavors, museums, employees associations, family foundations for specific and general purposes and national athletic organizations.

A charity must apply to national revenue for registration, presenting data on purpose, organizations, etc. Each one must report annually on its operations. If it fails to report and respond to notices from DNR, then the registration is revoked. About 500 charities lose their registration each year.

The total estimated take through tax deductibility of the 35,000 odd charities is $500 million.

This strikes me as a low figure.

I wanted to know how much came from individuals, how much from corporations. No one is sure.

Frankly, I couldn't come up with anything worthwhile in answers to such questions. In a few months StatCan will have the first of a publication called "selected financial statistics" on religious and the other charities but these will be several years behind time.

Whatever the publication is worth, it will be too late for the public discussion Turner has proclaimed.

On budget night, this paper on charities looked somewhat impressive, as did its high-minded purpose. Then, one discovers that the government has nothing to detail or substance to put into the public discussion other than a few intentions. So your doubts grow about this government's conception of participatory democracy.

In effect, there will be another exercise in elitism. The big charities and foundations will probably make specific representations if they feel the proposed changes will hurt them. Most of the nine million odd tax-paying Canadians, however, will never know what's going on.

Thinking of Tomorrow

It is always inspiring to see our national leaders rise above mere partisan politics to give due consideration to such great moral issues of our time as capital punishment, abortion and the appointment of senators.

Current negotiations over Senate appointments, for instance, are living proof that our parliamentary system is so flexible that, despite the fiercest party differences, it enables men of good will to find honorable solutions to momentous problems.

The prime minister, in an act of stunning generosity, has offered to replace Conservatives who retire from the Senate with more Conservatives. He therefore sacrifices some power to reward Liberal hacks, buddies, fund-raisers, organizers, arm-twisters, redundant cabinet ministers, MPs of dwindling usefulness and others to whom he thinks he owes a $29,300-a-year favor.

Why? What brought on this fit of insane nobility? The answer, my fellow Canadians, is that the prime minister wants to prevent the Senate's degenerating from a venerable joke to a ludicrous sham.

The Senate now consists of 70 Liberals, 17 Conservatives, a couple of independents, a Social Credit member, and a fellow who calls himself an independent Liberal. There are 11 vacancies.

While the Senate's cup runneth over with true Grits those 17 Tories are having a fairly desperate time attending sittings and, at the same time, keeping an eye on all the Liberals at assorted committees. Their physical condition naturally varies from good to decrepit.

Meanwhile, Senator Frank Welch of Wolfville, N.S., a Tory, plans to quit the Senate, when he turns 75 on July 14, and the prime minister has asked the Conservatives to nominate possible successors. Trudeau wants five names, and, since he likes some Tories more than others, the right to make the final selection.

There was talk of a similar arrangement before the last election but the Tories were suspicious. What if they actually won? Wouldn't Stanfield then have been obliged to appoint some Liberal senators?

A disagreeable thought. He's been in politics a lot longer than Trudeau, and he has his own Tory hacks, buddies, fundraisers, organizers, arm-twisters . . . Consider, for instance, merely the seven members of his Nova Scotia caucus.

Four have been in the Commons for 18 years. Rumors of a secret meeting at which Stanfield delicately plucked their interest in the Senate suggest that at least five, maybe six and possibly even all seven want Welch's seat.

Some Tories might resent the idea that Trudeau, of all people, has the final say on Tory Senate appointments. Might he not choose the very Conservative who'd given him the least trouble and was therefore, by definition, the least Conservative? A tame Tory?

With a diabolical chuckle, might he not coldly reject as senatorial timber the ineffective provincial Tory leader whom other Tories want to see safely in Ottawa before the next provincial election?

Despite such suspicions, however, the precedent-shattering Tory idea whereby Trudeau will choose some senators from a roster proposed by the Conservatives themselves is a masterpiece of the sort of compromise for which Canadian political life is famous.

The pragmatic beauty of Trudeau's seeking his enemies' advice on rewarding his enemies is that it preserves the prime minister's authority to name senators while at the same time it preserves the Tories' right at least to influence Tory appointments. If little else.

Good leaders, no matter what their political hue, work together to plan not merely for tomorrow but for the long pull as well. That's what the new save-the-Senate system is all about and, if anyone has cause to complain about it, it's probably only one of those oddballs who thinks the NDP deserve a voice in the place that gives sober second thought to legislation.

DETROIT (UPI) — Those rusty car hulks that blight city and countryside alike are fast becoming a major resource. About 90 per cent of the 8 to 10 million cars scrapped each year now are being recycled for their metal content.

The automobile, one of the largest users of steel, has become the largest single source of post-consumer steel scrap for re-use in steel mills and foundries.

Detroit's automakers are counting on that continuing high scrap rate to help pull them out of the most prolonged sales slump since the Depression. It began 21 months ago when the Arabs shut off the oil flow.

Detroit executives admit the scrap rate has dropped from the peak hit in 1972 and 1973 because more Americans are hanging on to their older cars. But they contend scrapage during the deep winter slump was higher than the sales rate, meaning sooner or later those cars will have to be replaced.

Dr. L. R. Mahoney, a scientist on the Ford Motor Co.'s scientific research staff, says development of a new piece of equipment — the auto shreddder — for processing scrap has increased recycling dramatically.

Up until now, the principal motive for recycling the junk car has been to recover the iron and steel which make up about 80 per cent of the car's weight. Until the mid-'60s, 3,500 scrap processors handled a variety of hand-dismantling and sorting operations to recover the metal from about 6 million junk cars annually.

"The past 10 years has seen a dramatic improvement in the nature of the scrap steel and iron from the junk car, due primarily to the develop-

LONDON business

Neonex

Neonex International Ltd. has announced it has sold for cash Tape Distributors, its record and tape-rack jobbing business in Alberta and British Columbia, to David Jones Distributors Ltd. of Calgary.

Neonex, with its Toronto office, is continuing in the custom record and tape business and will be primarily involved with the national and international marketing of products such as long-play records and tapes that are assembled especially for sale through department stores and promoted by television advertising.

Renn Industries

Renn Industries Inc. has reported net earnings of $308,000 or 18.8 cents per share for the six-month period ended April 30, 1975, more than quadrupling the restated net earnings of $64,000 or 4.2 cents per share for the same period a year ago.

Company president T. F. Tyson attributes the earnings performance to profitable operations in all divisions, especially in the industrial hoist and box division, and "a conscious policy to eliminate unprofitable lines."

Sales for the period totalled $6,008,000, an 11-per-cent increase over 1974.

Homco Industries

Homco Industries Ltd. has reported a loss of $568,219 or 67.59 cents a share for the first quarter of 1975.

This compares with a profit of $106,363 or 12.65 cents a share in the same period in 1974.

The company, which manufactures and sells mobile homes, has factories in Pembroke, Ont., Estevan, Sask., and Camrose, Alta. as well as Kelowna.

On their January-February tour of the U.S. and Canada, Led Zeppelin pointedly skipped San Francisco. Now, the band is set to perform an outdoor concert at the Oakland Coliseum August 23rd — one of only two or three ballparks shows they're planning to do on their quick fall visit (New Orleans is in the running for a date, last we heard).

No one will say so, but Led Zep snubbed the Bay Area this spring as a way of snubbing promoter Bill Graham. The last time the band worked with Graham, for a Kezar Stadium show last year, the band reportedly showed up late, with no phone alerts, and made excessive demands on arrival.

The volatile Graham is said to have been upset. Words may have been exchanged. Anyway, early this year, San Francisco missed out. Now, our friend and source, Raw Throat, tells us, "they got back together out of mutual necessity," nudge-nudge, say no more.

Graham, our Mr. Throat implies, came around. When Led Zep played LA this year, the two parties decided to try a reconciliation, and when Zep's manager Peter Grant and a band member arrived at San Francisco International, they were greeted at the runway with a Mercedes limousine.

Whisked to the Oakland Coliseum for an inspection, the Britons were met with a table set with a tea service. It's definitely lovelier, the second time around.

Speaking of which: Rumors abound that Graham is engaged (he's been married once before) to 23-year-old Marcia Sult. When we asked, he told his secretary he couldn't decide whether or not to deny it, and finally chose a "no comment."

What he would like to say, we understand, is that something's happening, but "engagement" is such an outmoded word and concept and besides, one's personal affairs have nothing to do with one's work. Sure, sure.

Kris Kristofferson, set to star in the movie, "The Sailor Who Fell From Grace with the Sea," was in Salem, N.Y. recently, visiting manager Bert Bloch with band members Billy Swan and Sammy Creason.

Kris and his buddies took a canoe out on a nearby lake one afternoon. During the cruise, Kristofferson, obviously unfamiliar with canoe do's and don'ts, stood up to stretch.

He promptly fell from grace with the lake as the canoe capsized. The three had to cling to the canoe's side for 45 minutes — until help arrived. It is not known whether or not Swan sang I Can Help during the wait. Until Sailor shoots in September, Kristofferson will stay on dry land.

He's working on Vigilante Force, a movie about an oil town thrown into confusion by ecological concerns.

Tammy Wynette, hot in England with her 1968 U.S. hit, Stand By Your Man, performed recently at the Hammersfield-Odeon theatre in London. In the audience, direct from his hospital bed following his bus-jumping disaster — was Evel Knievel.

Wynette, of course, asked her fellow countryperson to take a bow.

"We're all looking for heroes," she cooed, "and I'm thrilled to have a man like Evel Knievel in my audience." Knievel, with some help from a bodyguard, managed to stand up, stiff, clumsy, and mangled. Still, he's Our Hero.

Neil Diamond will record his next album with Robbie Robertson of the Band producing. The presence of the genius guitarist-composer — a new acquaintance of Diamond's — hints at a shift in direction for Neil. And, according to one associate, "Neil's anxious to get back in his old groove after all this crap (specifically the Jonathan Livingston Seagull soundtrack)."

Diamond, who will record in LA, paid a visit to his childhood stomping grounds in Brooklyn recently for some songwriting inspiration. Money sings: Soupy Sales' two sons, Hunt and Tony, have formed a new band with their chauffeur.

The group is called Millionaires. The Sales, who once played in Todd Rundgren's Runt (guitar and bass, respectively) live in a Beverley Hills mansion and own a Rolls-Royce with dollar bills painted on the sides. They don't have a label deal yet, but they're recording anyway, with Bob Ezrin (Alice Cooper, Lou Reed) producing. Members of Hydra don't have dollar bills on their cars, but they did have plans to feature a few bucks on the cover of their next LP, Land of Money. But the Treasury Department didn't buy the idea of a fat cop blowing his nose into a C-note, so the photo has been scotched. . . . Elton John, whose new album was blocked out of Number One in England in its first week of release by the Stylistics, is still runnerup — this time to Paul McCartney and Wings' new one.

Some are blaming Elton's British label, DJM, for pricing the single album at $7.75 (compared to about $6.30 for the McCartney album). DJM says the cost of shrinkwrap — to keep the posters and booklets inside the album jacket — forced the price up.

Alice Cooper doesn't need a reason to give a party, but the one he hosted at the Hollywood Palladium, he said, was to celebrate the Bicentennial and his two LA concerts.

Reasons enough, certainly, to mix 2,000 guests with an Uncle Sam on stilts, an organ grinder, (with monkey a mime troupe, dancing gypsies, drag queens,

A Warm and Vital Tribute to Myth

A Movie Review
By NORA HUTCHISON

Alexandre Stavisky was a master swindler whose illegal dealings brought France to the verge of civil war. The French press labelled Stavisky "the king of the crooks" after a series of extraordinary escapades gained him not only control of the French underworld but the "protection of well-disposed members of government."

Stavisky came to France in 1900, at the age of 14, accompanied by his Russian Jewish parents. His first connections with organized crime was as a gigolo; from there he moved on to theft, drug-trafficking and extortion. By the late '20s, he was thoroughly involved in fraudulent wheeling and dealing at the international level.

The extent of the corruption stemming from his actions was not uncovered, however, until after his death in January, 1934 (he was found with a bullet hole in the right side of the head, and a gun in his left hand). During the investigations a high official in the Public Prosecutor's Department in Paris was murdered, allegedly to safeguard some well-known figures. The scandal was exploited both by the Communists and by right-wing groups who maintained that the Stavisky Affair proved the corruption existing in the democratic system in France. The furor, which was duly reported in the press, led to serious rioting in Paris, followed by a general strike and the establishment of a right-wing government composed of members whose reputations were untainted by the scandal.

Alain Resnais' film of Stavisky only touches briefly on these historical aspects of his life — it's really a tribute to the flamboyant, mythic character whose actions had intrigued the French public for over 30 years, and to the era of nouveau riche wealth and luxury which he represented, and which, with his death, came to an end. The music score by Stephan Sondheim, with its nuances of Gershwin, is particularly evocative, and reinforces Resnais' intended atmosphere of melancholy and nostalgia.

The Resnais film is full of that cool '30s elegance that the privileged few could enjoy — the beautifully constructed, fluid dresses that revealed and concealed in the most exciting ways, an Art Deco diamond necklace, a shiny white private plane with a red nose cone, and those wonderful cars.

The film blends two plots — Resnais' impressionistic view of Stavisky's spectacular life as a criminal, and a briefer, almost subliminal account of Leon Trotsky's first months as a political exile in France. The Trotsky sequences provide a perspective on the Stavisky case — Trotsky, too, was a witness to the end of an era and an enormous influence on subsequent political events.

As Stavisky, Jean-Paul Belmondo gives the film warmth and vitality. He embodies the characteristics Stavisky was famous for — the famous smile, irresistible charm and an enthusiasm for everything that life has to offer. But Belmondo goes farther and contrasts Stavisky's lust for life with his boredom of death. His race against the inevitable becomes the main subject of the film — and his fears are reflected in his eyes.

Resnais is the creator of some of the best of contemporary French cinema — for instance, Hiroshima Mon'Amour, Last Year at Marienbad and La Guerre Est Finie — and Stavisky is a complex, worthwhile addition to this body of work. His films embody his extraordinary sense of visual design — each shot, each camera movement, each editing decision is worked out in terms of the overall look of the film. His intricate, schematized approach often alienates audiences, but it's an exciting, stimulating, highly original style which has contributed greatly to the art of the cinema.

'FIRST PERSON I SAW I SHOT'

CLEVELAND (UPI) — A former Ohio national guardsmen with impaired vision says he fired a rifle shot at a Kent State University student during an anti-war demonstration in 1970 because "he was just the first person I saw."

Former guardsmen James McGee testified Monday in a $46 million civil suit arising from the slayings of four students and the wounding of nine others at Kent State May 4, 1970.

McGee, who said he had poor eyesight and was not wearing his glasses, said he fired one shot at a student demonstrator who "came out from behind a tree" and two other shots.

"I fired the first two shots almost straight up in the air and I fired the third shot at a student who was near a tree about 60 feet from me," McGee said.

McGee was asked if the student constituted a threat to his life.

"No," McGee responded, "not that man. I didn't single him out. He was just the first person I saw."

Forty former and present Ohio national guardsmen and state officials, including Gov. James Rhodes, are defendants in the suit arising from the shootings.

Charges against Richard Snyder, former member of Guard Company A, were dismissed Monday on a motion from attorneys for the plaintiffs. Snyder admitted firing two "warning shots" into the air during the campus demonstration.

Snyder testified "there was no need to fire" when the guardsmen opened fire on the student demonstrators. Snyder underwent about one-hour of cross examination by David Engdahl, attorney for the wounded students and parents of those killed who filed the civil action.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoid case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Agnew Jr. Charged As Peeping Tom

BALTIMORE — The son of Spiro Agnew, former vice-president of the United States, has been arrested on charges of being a peeping tom.

Randy Agnew, 29, was charged with trespassing "for the purpose of invading the privacy of the occupants of the building by looking in the window, door and other apertures," police said.

He was arrested early Monday after Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Frye saw someone peering through the venetian blinds on their bedroom window.

Frye chased a man and captured him for the police after a fight.

MOSCOW — Soviet authorities, in a move reaffirming the Kremlin's restrictive emigration policies, have refused an exit visa to Ernst Neivestny, one of the country's best known and highly regarded sculptors.

Neivestny disclosed the official decision in an emotional statement to Western journalists Monday evening. He said the sole reason given for the rejection was that his wife — from whom he has long been separated — and his 18-year-old daughter would not be going with him.

OTTAWA — Robert McKeown, a veteran member of the parliamentary press gallery and Ottawa editor of Weekend Magazine, died in hospital Sunday night of cancer.

He is survived by his wife, Valda, two sons, Robert and Terence, both of Ottawa; two brothers in England, and a sister in Vancouver.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — A schooner captain and a fashion model who made a marriage vow while drifting around the Caribbean for three days in a life raft, have fulfilled their pact.

Robyn Jennifer Fairfax-Ross, 26, of Sydney, Australia, and Anthony Pike, 41, of Singapore, were married Monday at a friend's home here.

"I proposed on the raft," Pike had said after a Florida-bound cruise liner rescued them off the coast of Haiti June 23.

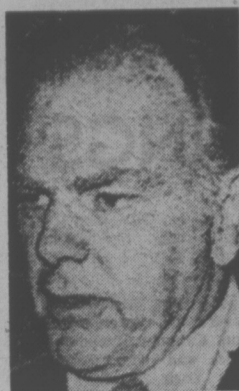

They had been on the five-foot raft without water and with only raw seagull and some raisins to eat after their schooner sank June 21.

George Kerr Coming Back

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said Monday it is "very likely" George Kerr will be sworn in as solicitor-general Wednesday.

The premier was to meet with Kerr prior to today's sitting of the legislature to discuss the appointment.

Kerr, 51, PC Halton West resigned his cabinet post last February when testimony at a preliminary hearing of the Hamilton harbor dredging trial linked him to a $10,000 bribe.

Public Notice

Ottawa, June 27, 1975

AMENDMENTS TO THE TELEVISION BROADCASTING REGULATIONS

(Subliminal Advertising)

Following an announcement on February 3, 1975 and a Public Hearing held in Ottawa on March 11, 1975, the Commission has issued today the following amendments to the Television Broadcasting Regulations:

1. The Television Broadcasting Regulations are amended by adding thereto, immediately after section 9 thereof, the following section:

"9.1 (1) No station or network operator shall knowingly broadcast any advertising material that makes use of any subliminal device.

(2) In subsection (1), "subliminal device" means a technical device that is used to convey or attempt to convey a message to a person by means of images or sounds of very brief duration or by any other means without that person being aware that such a device is being used or being aware of the substance of the message being conveyed or attempted to be conveyed."

LAPONTE DECIDES IN FAVOR OF WINGS

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The official announcement can be expected to come out of Detroit at any moment, but a second member of the 1974-75 Victoria Cougars has signed a lucrative contract with a National Hockey League team.

Defenceman Rick LaPointe has decided to sign with Detroit Red Wings. He favored the NHL team's offer over one from Toronto Toros of the World Association.

LaPointe is believed to be in Detroit today with lawyer-agent Al Eagleson.

The contract offered by Detroit is for three years. In addition to a signing bonus, the Victoria-reared LaPointe is expected to be guaranteed about $100,000 a season.

Detroit's first choice, the 20-year-old LaPointe went fifth in the overall NHL draft.

Centre Mel Bridgman, the first draft choice, had previously signed with the Stanley Cup Philadelphia Flyers. Bridgman signed a five-year contract expected to bring him in excess of a half million dollars.

At least one other member of the graduating corps from Victoria's Western Canada League team is expected to pick up an NHL contract, possibly later this week.

Winger Don Cairns apparently has decided to sign with Kansas City Scouts of the NHL instead of with Indianapolis of the WHA.

Other graduates claimed in the drafts are Jim Gustafson, Kim Clarkson, Peter Morris and Eric Sanderson. Morris, selected by Pittsburgh Penguins as well as Edmonton Oilers, seemingly has settled on signing with the WHA team.

Clarkson, also drafted by Pittsburgh, is waiting until the Penguins' financial plight is settled before making a decision. For that reason, Morris is holding off his signing with Edmonton.

Sanderson and Gustafson may have to wait until the fall before signing. Both have been invited to NHL training camps — Gustafson by St. Louis and Sanderson by Kansas City — on a "make good" basis.

Elsewhere, defenceman Pat Price was expected to jump from Calgary Cowboys of the WHA and sign today with New York Islanders of the NHL. Price was drafted by and played for the Vancouver Blazers before the club moved to Calgary.

Victoria's Athletes Spreading the Word

Another big weekend for city athletes, and the list of successes makes good reading. Topping the parade could be the performance of Bate in the men's international invitation fastball tournament in Oshawa. The city club won in seven games, battered the ball unmercifully, had a grand total of 63 hits which included 18 home runs, seven by Bob Burrows.

This is fancy hitting indeed in a sport which is dominated as a rule by pitching. How often have you seen a 1-0 score as the end result? But Bate, who had been handcuffed here just a week ago Sunday by Vancouver Magicians, and held to a mere two hits in successive games, which they lost, 2-1 and 1-0, erupted with a vengeance in the East to once again rule as a prime threat for the Canadian championship which also will be conducted at Oshawa. Not only that, but Bate dominated the all-star selections, Reg Underwood, Burrows and Pete Songhurst being honored; Ken Bate taking the batting championship, and, as nearly always, big Stan Kern and Dave Ruthowsky being superb on the mound.

It was noted here last week that Bate batting had been spread at best in recent Pacific Coast Fastball League action. So, they took the hint and have loosened up, which is a good thing, because the Vancouver Magicians aren't really that far behind in calibre and do, in fact, lead Bate in the PCFL. And further, Magicians came second to Seattle Pay'n Pak in the Seattle invitational tournament on the weekend. Add it all up and it is a high recommendation for the softball which is being played here or, as league president John Oster commented: "That has to do something for our league. Bate winning a 14-team tournament and Magicians placing second in a 13-team event that included the top teams from the midwest and northwest."

Meanwhile, it's congratulations too to Cec Ferguson for his selection to the B.C. Willingdon Cup golf team, for a second time, and also the return of Doug Roxburgh to the four-man side. Roxburgh, in this book, is clearly the top amateur in the province and in the top three in the Dominion, while Ferguson must rank as No. 2 off his most recent performances this year and last. They will obviously carry the brunt of the load in the inter-provincial team matches as Bill Hobbs of Prince George and Muncie Booth of Vancouver are first timers in this company. It should be noted too that young Sandy Harper of Nanaimo barely missed the senior team while leading the juniors. He was in fourth place on Saturday after his fine 72 at Shaughnessy, but faltered with a 78 Sunday to finish two strokes back. But he'll be heard from. Again.

Meanwhile, Debbie Brill of the University of Victoria is jumping higher than ever before and Joyce Yakubowich (nee Sadowick) is running faster than her rivals. Miss Brill last week cleared the bar at six feet, 2 1/2 inches in Oslo, which is her best-over mark, while on Sunday Yakubowich won a 200-metre event in West Germany in 23.4 seconds. These are fine performances, approaching Olympic class, and besides, other members of touring Canadian track and field teams are faring extremely well in these international meets which can only bid well for the future, namely the Olympics. It wasn't many years ago that Canadian athletes were nearly always listed among the also-rans in this type of competition. Now parity is beginning to show and on the Canadian girls in general, and Brill and Yakubowich, in particular, it looks good.

In Tennis, Victoria's Wendy Barlow moved another notch up the ladder when she was selected to the Canadian junior tennis team following trials in Vancouver. She, and the others, will compete in tournaments in the Northwest and in Eastern Canada later this month. And hardly a week passes, either, without the name of Tom Griffin showing up in the medal list. On the weekend it was the Dogwood Invitational and Griffin ran second in the 1,500 metres to veteran Olympic competitor Bill Smart in 3:15.5, his best time, to Smart's 3:48.8; and another in the names-to-remember list is that of Tom Michel. He was the 200-metre winner in 22.4.

Yep, we're coming of age in our town, and there should be a welcome-home note too for Dale Shaw, who finished runner-up in the British Amateur Golf Championship this year, which should make her pretty close to being favorite for the B.C. Ladies' this week, too? Then, alas, it's time to shed a tear for yet another city type. Bill McAllister, who inherited the national soccer team, and probably wishes now he hadn't said he would serve as coach. It was Poland 8, Canada 1 in that first test. But give Bill time, and the authority, and maybe he, too, can join the winners' list.

BABE RUTH PLAYOFFS TO START WEDNESDAY

Defending champion Cosmopolitans have the bye in the three-team Victoria district Babe Ruth baseball playoffs starting Wednesday at Lambrick Park.

Saanich Evening Optimists play Esquimalt-Vic West in the first game of the double-knockout tournament starting at 6:30 p.m. with the winner meeting the host club Thursday.

Losers of the first two games meet Friday with the winner of that one playing Thursday's winner for the championship on Saturday. If an additional game is necessary, it will be played Sunday.

All games start at 6:30 p.m. at Lambrick.

The champion advances to the B.C. finals, an eight-team double-knockout tournament beginning July 18 at Sanscha Park in Sidney.

Hockey Stars Tackle Uplands for a Cause

Professional hockey players will team up with members of the Uplands Golf Club on July 20 to go to bat for the B.C. Heart Foundation.

All proceeds from the celebrity tournament will go to the Heart Foundation.

Most of the hockey players participating in the unique event will perform as instructors at the Team Canada

TOUGHER GUIDELINES FOR ALIEN ATHLETES

WASHINGTON (CP) — From now on, United States teams in the National Hockey League will be required to file annual reports with the U.S. labor department outlining the number of non-American citizens on their rosters.

In addition, the clubs will have to delineate what recruiting activities the league conducts for U.S.-born players.

A spokesman for the department said Monday that similar rules will apply to baseball and soccer leagues in the U.S.

"Since 1967, the labor department has had blanket certification for top athletes and entertainers with outstanding merit, who can enter without specific certification," the spokesman said.

Now, he said, such blanket certification will be conditional upon the filing of such annual reports and will apply only to top leagues. Others will have to apply for specific player-by-player certification.

"What threw the whole thing into the fan was soccer," the labor department spokesman said.

"Small soccer leagues had been springing up and forming ethnic teams, paying the players something like $300 a month. The players were coming in under blanket certification.

"Then, when these small leagues collapsed, the players were drifting off into other lines of work within the U.S."

"It's our job to certify that nobody in the U.S. is able to do the job the former player is applying for."

He said that the NHL, baseball and soccer are the only sports which will be required to justify blanket certification annually because these are the main sports in the U.S. with a high percentage of foreign players.

Burrards Share Lacrosse Lead

COQUITLAM (CP) — Vancouver Burrards moved into a tie for first place in the Western Lacrosse Association Monday with a 13-8 victory over last-place Coquitlam Adairies before about 300 fans.

Gord Fredericksen scored four goals for Vancouver, which has played three more games than New Westminster Salmonbellies. The co-leaders meet Saturday in New Westminster.

Coquitlam lead 4-3 after the first period but the game was decided at 15:53 of the second period when Fredericksen scored his third goal of the game to break a 6-6 tie.

Mike Smith, Ron Pinder and Brian Bergum scored two goals each for the Burrards with singles going to Don Cameron, Bryan Campbell and Dan Cameron.

Former Peterborough junior star Lloyd Hutchinson scored five Coquitlam goals while Doug May got three. It was the second win in as many nights for the Burrards.

Gary's Way 'Quite Foolish'

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (AP) — Gary Player, defending his title, will begin the British open golf championship over the tough Carnoustie course Wednesday with less than two complete rounds of practice.

"It's the smallest preparation I have ever had for the British Open," the little South African said.

"It's not the wisest way to do it. In fact it's quite foolish."

Player, 38, arrived from Switzerland a mere 48 hours before the start of the big tournament.

By contrast, Jack Nicklaus, rated top favorite with the bookies, has been practising on the 7,065-yard, par-72 links since last Friday.

On Saturday, Nicklaus shot

Dale Setting Pace

TRAIL — Nobody's discounting Marilyn Palmer, but the defending champion has her work cut out if she hopes to retain the British Columbia women's golf championship.

She has to overcome a back problem, a "rusty game," and a four-stroke lead enjoyed by Glen Meadows' Dale Shaw.

Miss Shaw, the five-time Victoria champion who has just returned — along with Miss Palmer — from a European tour, set the pace Monday. Dale posted a four-over par 79 to grab a one-stroke lead after the first round of the 36-hole qualifying test.

Val White of Marine Drive and Richmond's Flo McFall were next with 80s while former Victorian Anita Hemmingson held fourth place with an 83.

Then came Miss Palmer. The defending champion is expected to qualify for match play that starts Wednesday, but she's been having her problems.

First of all, she hasn't completely recovered from an attack of scarlet fever that curtailed her appearance in European tournaments. Adding to her woes is a pulled back muscle suffered in a practice round Sunday.

"I haven't played in three weeks, and I'm not quite ready," said Miss Palmer after her eighty-over-par performance over the 6,351-yard Birchbank course.

Temperatures near 30 degrees (celsius) seemed to bother other competitors, the majority of whom ran into grief on the back nine.

Seventeen golfers broke 90, including Vancouver Island's two other competitors — Dorothy DeGirolamo of Gorge and Glen Meadows' Diane Denoyer. Mrs. DeGirolamo, who succeeded Miss Shaw and city champion this year, scored a commendable 84 while the personable Miss Denoyer carded an 89.

The top 15 after today's qualifying round advance into the championship flight.

Pele's Appearance Sets Crowd Record

VANCOUVER (CP) — The largest crowd ever to attend a soccer game here was at Empire Stadium, Monday, to see Pele, the multi-million dollar star of New York Cosmos.

And while the "Black Pearl" didn't score, he still did not disappoint his 26,495 admirers, coming up with a string of short, stabbing passes to his teammates to help the Cosmos defeat Vancouver Whitecaps 2-1 in an exhibition American Soccer League game.

Mordecai Spiegler, another newcomer to the Cosmos this season, scored both New York goals, three minutes apart midway through the second half. Sergio Zanatta got the Vancouver goal near the end of the game after goalkeeper Kurt Kuykendall bobbed a Barrie Mitchell shot.

The Whitecaps outshot the Cosmos 19-7 in the first half with New York goalkeeper

Sam Nusum, who played for Vancouver last year, making a series of fine saves.

QUEBECOIS FALL BACK TO SECOND

Montreal Quebecois didn't seem to have anything to sweeten the pot Monday night.

Quebecois, up for sale and at home for a game in which the National Lacrosse League lead was at stake, tumbled 16-12 to Long Island Tomahawks and drew a crowd of only 4,253 fans.

It was the second win in as many nights for Tomahawks, who pulled even Sunday night by tripping Maryland Arrows 18-13 before 5,199 spectators.

And another Sunday game, Quebec Caribou snapped a tie for last place and won their first road game of the season by defeating Boston Bolts 16-15 before a meagre audience of 1,935.

Organized by the Uplands Club, the tournament format will be a team affair with one player teaming up with three Uplands members.

Ticket admission ($2 for adults and $1 for children) will enable spectators to qualify for a trip-for-two to San Francisco.

Tickets may be obtained at Uplands or the Heart Foundation office at 1008 Blandshard Street.

Edmonton's Doug Lecuyer, who plays junior "A" hockey with Edmonton Oil Kings of the Western Canada League during the winter, Sunday became the youngest player to win the Alberta amateur golf title in the 61-year history of the event.

Lecuyer, 17, defeated Laurie Scott of Edmonton on a third extra hole. Ken Wassen of Calgary also qualified for extra play but dropped out when he three-putted on the first hole.

Lecuyer, twice provincial junior champion, defeated Scott with a par on the 150-yard third hole while Scott, who three-putted, took a bogey.

The three finished tied after 54 holes at 215, two over par. Jim Loftus of Calgary was one shot behind with 216 and John Gallimore of Edmonton.

Final round of the British Open golf championship will be televised Saturday by CBC starting at 1:30 p.m. PDT.

The tournament, in Carnoustie, Scotland, begins Wednesday. The telecast will cover holes from the 12th to the 18th.

Crucial Game For Bakers

One month ago Victoria McDonald's major concern was the struggle with Burnaby Cablevision for first place in the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League.

However, the situation has changed radically since then and could change more tonight when the Bakers take on New Westminster Salmonbellies at Esquimalt Sports Centre starting at 8 p.m.

At stake will be second place. The Bakers own it now but a loss against New Westminster would earn the Salmonbellies a share of the runner-up spot.

Neither club, though, is a threat in the standings to Burnaby, which holds a comfortable 12-point bulge over the Bakers.

New Westminster has shown bursts of brilliance in the past two weeks. On June 27 the club thrashed the Bakers 24-10 at home and last Friday they had the highest offensive output of a season this season in a 27-12 victory over the visiting Coquitlam J-Hawks.

In their last outing Saturday in Richmond, though, the Salmonbellies were anything but brilliant as they dropped a 20-16 decision to the Roundrunners.

Top scorer for New Westminster is Jack Fulton, who ranks ninth with 69 points.

The league's leading scorer is Victoria's Kevin Alexander, who had two goals and six assists in the Bakers' 17-10 loss Sunday to Burnaby.

Alexander has 122 points, including 74 goals, and leads runner-up Mike Holden of Burnaby by 31 points. Gary Holte of Coquitlam is third, 39 behind Alexander.

CALEDON, Ont. (CP) — Juliette Rochon of Val d'Or, Que., scored a record 1081 points in Monday's opening round at the Canadian archery championships.

The round gave Mrs. Rochon a one-point lead over Lucille Lessard of Loretteville, Que., who had held the previous record of 1071 points.

Mrs. Rochon beat her own previous personal record by 80 points.

Wayne Pullen of Dorchester, Ont., was the early leader after the opening men's competition which was restricted to field rounds.

Driving's Better Than Winning Store

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

SEATTLE — Why would a man who has won two Indianapolis 500 championships and $1 million for sale 10 years of retirement and return to car racing at the age of 55?

The man is Roger Ward, Indy winner in 1959 and 1962 who has entered the International Drivers' Challenge open stock car series that runs next Tuesday at Victoria's Western Speedway. He can give you any number of reasons.

The fact is, Ward might never have come back if his brother hadn't owed him $2,000 and a stock car driver named Terry McKee hadn't fallen off a motorcycle and broken his arm.

He explained it all at an IDC press conference here Monday.

He had been running a tire business in Los Angeles since his retirement from racing in 1965 and dropped out to the track one Sunday last summer to give some race driving time to one of his employees.

Four days later, McKee fell off his motorcycle and Ward drove for him the following Sunday.

Not long after that, a driver named Tom Patton offered to sell Ward his 1964 Chevrolet stock car, minus engine, for $2,000. Patton wanted to try sprint cars.

It so happened that Roger's brother, Ron, built sprint cars. He also owed Roger the two grand. Roger saw a way to collect. He'd take the Chevrolet for nothing and Ron would knock $2,000 off the price of the sprint car for Patton. It was a deal.

Since then, Ward has moved up to a 1967 Chevrolet, which he'll drive Tuesday in Victoria.

That $2,000 debt wasn't the only reason Ward came back. "It beats working for a living," he pointed out Monday. "Compared to race driving, nothing in this world is as boring as running a tire store."

He offered one more explanation, probably closest to the real reason.

"When I started driving again," he said, "I wondered what people would say. I soon realized it doesn't matter. It's my life and I'm the guy who's got to live it."

Living is something Ward does to the fullest. He has crammed a lot of it into his 55 years and now he's starting again.

Since he began professional driving in 1946, he's run more than 4,000 races, including 15 Indys, won two United States Auto Club national championships and one national stock car title, has come through a Can-Am crash at Riverside, Calif., that left him with a broken back, and has raised five children.

These are the statistics, but what about the man behind them?

You can get a pretty good idea from the story of that Can-Am crash in 1963. Ward got out of hospital with his back in a brace and slipped over to Las Vegas for a rest cure at the crap table.

"I tired out pretty quickly and all I wanted to do was get to bed," he related. "But every time I'd decide to leave, I'd roll another winner. By the end, I was propping myself up with one hand and shooting the dice with the other."

He hit the sack $8,000 richer.

Does the back still bother him?

"I get a slight pain in my shoulder," he grinned, "when I play gin rummy too long."

After a career like his, isn't Ward's return to stock cars really just for kicks?

"Sure, I'm doing it for fun," he admitted, "but I still want to win." He has $3,000 in purse money this year to prove it.

The fun began to fade for Ward in 1966. About that time car owners took a fancy to the big-name European drivers at Indy and the pressure began to mount.

"I also found myself driving against the sons of guys I drove against when I started out," he added, "and I realized I was getting too old for this sort of thing."

Ward obviously is enjoying his comeback, but there are problems.

"I find now that my reputation precedes me," he said. "My competitors all want to beat a big name. Mine may not be the biggest name, but it's the oldest."

How old?

"Well, I was the national stock car driving champion in 1951 and that was before most of the kids in racing today were born."

ROGER WARD

Speedway in Mount Vernon, Wash., Friday, back to Spanaway Saturday and wind up in Portland Sunday.

A total purse of $40,250 is offered and you can be pretty sure of one thing — when it's all over, one of the guys near the front of the line at the pay window will be an oldtimer with an infectious grin named Roger Ward.

He's been there before.

Big Red Machine Humming in High

By The Associated Press

The Big Red Machine of baseball is in high gear, rolling along so smoothly that even the man at the controls can't quite believe it.

"It's incredible," said Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson after his Reds' latest triumph, a 7-3 decision Monday night over Philadelphia Phillies. That gave Cincinnati four wins in a row, seven in the last eight games and a record of 35 victories in 44 outings dating back to May 21.

"No one is supposed to win like that," said Anderson. But the Reds are doing it, and as a result have opened an 8½-game lead over Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West Division.

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh Pirates blanked Chicago Cubs 5-0, New York Mets beat Atlanta Braves 3-1, Houston Astros defeated Montreal Expos 5-1 and St. Louis Cardinals beat San Francisco Giants 8-6.

What turned the Reds, stumbling along at the .300 mark seven weeks ago, into the winningest team in the majors?

"You've got to go back to the move—shifting Pete Rose, to third," said Anderson. "It's not just that one thing, but that set off a lot of other things that happened. Getting George Foster's bat in there has been tremendous."

The move of Rose doubly strengthened the club. Rose provided the best third base play Cincinnati has had in quite a while, and Foster has blossomed as a regular outfielder, batting .283 with 15 homers.

Foster got No. 15 against the Phils, a two-run shot in the seventh inning that broke the game open. Tony Perez also hit a two-run homer in the first inning.

Houston got only four hits against Montreal.

Milwaukee's Bob Sheldon and Boston's Jim Willoughby, who were in the minors last week, made major contributions to their new American League teams Monday night.

Second baseman Sheldon, who committed a costly error in the fourth inning, singled home one run in the fifth and two more in the sixth, lifting the Brewers to a 4-3 victory over Kansas City Royals.

Meanwhile, Willoughby came on in the seventh inning of the Red Sox 6-3 triumph over Minnesota Twins, struck out Eric Soderholm with two runners aboard and went on to earn his first save, fanning five in 2-1-3 innings.

In other American League action, New York Yankees defeated Texas Rangers 5-2 to remain one game behind Boston and one percentage point ahead of Milwaukee in the East Division, Oakland A's beat Cleveland Indians 7-3 and Detroit Tigers edged Chicago White Sox 2-1.

Taylor Gains Singles Final

Top-seeded Marty Taylor gained the men's "A" singles final of the Victoria Closed tennis tournament by downing Roger Skillings 6-3, 7-5 in a semi-final match Monday at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

Taylor, who used a strong service and service return to gain the berth, will meet either Neil Coultas or Greg Miller in the final. Coultas and Miller play their semi-final tonight.

In men's doubles play, Bob Hutton and John Nichol topped Scott Braley and Neil Polson 6-2, 6-3 in a quarter-final match. Hutton and Nichol are seeded fourth while Braley and Polson were unranked.

Taylor continues all week with finals in all events scheduled Saturday at the Racquet Club.

Edge for Seniors

Gorge Hotel tripped Victoria Senior Babe Ruth All-Stars 9-7 Monday at Lambrick Park to give Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League teams a 5-3 edge in interlocking games this season.

Victory moved Gorge to within one game of league-leading Greaves Movers.

Three runs in the fifth inning, highlighted by a double from Russ Holmes, gave Gorge the win.

Three Teams Survive In Little League Play

Beacon Hill, Triangle and National remained alive by winning losers' bracket games in the double-loss elimination Little League area baseball playoffs Monday.

Beacon Hill scored three runs in the ninth inning to down Sidney 7-4 in the Area Two battle at Samscha Park; Triangle survived in the Area Three tourney at Hampton Park by defeating Oak Bay 7-2 and National lambasted Central Saanich 13-1 at Hillside Avenue to remain in the running for the Area One title.

The losers were all eliminated.

Marty Hall emerged as the prime mover in the Beacon Hill victory. He picked up the pitching decision by striking out 19 batters while going the distance in the extra-innings struggle and also contributed a two-run single in the ninth inning.

Rob Ekstrom provided Triangle with some welcome relief when he came on in the fourth inning with the score tied, 2-2. He then proceeded to hold Oak Bay hitless through the final three innings.

Dave Anderson hurled a one-hitter to lead the National victory as the winners came up with seven runs in the second inning without any hits.

Sidney 602 020 000—4 6 4
Beacon Hill 110 003—7 9 3

Cycling Team Change

Ron Hayman and Brian Keast, both of the Greater Vancouver area, have bumped Robert Naessgaard of Port Alberni and Mike McPhelan of Vancouver off the B.C. bicycle racing team which will compete in the Western Canada Summer Games in Regina, Aug. 10-17.

Hayman, the current B.C. road champion, and Keast were both scheduled to represent Canada in the world championships, but the national organizing body has decided not to send a team to that competition.

POLES ARE TOUGH

MONTREAL (CP) — Poland proved more than a match for Canada in international soccer play at the Autostade Sunday, cruising to an 8-1 win with the Canadians almost defenceless against the powerful Polish attack.

The Poles, 1972 Olympic champions, showed their strength early and jumped into a 2-0 half-time lead, then completely overwhelmed the Canadians in the final half.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

If one were to look at all four hands in the diagram below, it would be difficult to visualize how South went down at his game contract. But when play had ended, South had incurred not merely a one-trick set, but a two-trick set. His demise came about as a result of highly-imaginative defensive play by the East defender, George Boehm of New York City. The deal came up in a team-of-four match. Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

♥ 10 8 4 2
♦ J 10 9
WEST
♠ 10 9 8 4 2	♠ 7 5 3
♥ Q 7	♥ J
♦ 8 7 5	♦ A 6 4 3 2
♣ J 5 4	♣ A Q 9 2
SOUTH
♠ K 6
♦ K Q
♣ K 7 6

The bidding:

South West North East
1♥ Pass 2♥ Pass
4♥ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♦.

West, with his miserable hand, had no good opening lead to make, so he elected to open the eight of diamonds as "a top of nothing" lead, hoping that he might be able to build up a trick or two for his partner. Boehm, in the East seat, won the trick with his ace, and at trick two promptly fired back the queen of clubs. Declarer now took a time-out for reflection.

As South viewed it, East probably had the Q-J of clubs some number of times. And it was not unlikely that he might have had the Q-J-9 heading his club suit. If such were the set-up, South's winning play would be to allow the queen to win. Assuming that East then continued with the club jack, South would cover with the king. West would take his (presumed) ace, and dummy's ten-spot would now become the highest-ranking club left in the deck.

And if East, after his club queen had won the trick, next continued with a low club, South would play low from his own hand. With East possessing the club jack (South presumed), West would win the trick with the ace, and South's king would become a winner.

So South played low on East's queen, and at trick three East led the club deuce. South, convinced that East had the jack of clubs, followed suit with the seven, and West's jack won the trick. West then led his remaining club to East's ace. South's king falling on this trick.

East now led his remaining club, and no matter whether South ruffed with a low trump or with the king, he could not prevent West's queen of trumps from winning a trick.

Of course if South had guessed to put up the king of clubs on either of East's first two club leads, he would have fulfilled his contract. Sometimes one guesses right—and sometimes one doesn't.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST for Wednesday, July 9

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on making home a happier place. Despite what appears to be a "gloom cloud," you are going to receive heartening news. You will get more for your product, real estate or creation than originally anticipated.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New Moon position highlights dealings with those whose interests are intertwined with your own. Relatives or not, these persons feel you have an obligation to them. Fair or not, you have to deal with it. Behind scenes, there is backing, support. You're not alone!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New Moon position, aspects point to costs, what is worth what, how you adjust to changing conditions, boost from friends and basic, creative changes. Another Gemini and a Virgo figure prominently. Gain is shown through written word.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Lunar aspects coincide with knowledge gained in past and currently utilized. Practical affairs, including property values, tend to dominate. One you love shows that you are loved, too. Spiritual regeneration could be on agenda. Taurus, Libra individuals are in picture.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Where there was heat, there now could also be light. Darkened areas receive benefit of investigation. You are able to perceive difference between knowing, wishing and fantasizing. You learn a secret. Use knowledge constructively.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Friends may have bleak outlook. Key is to be realistic without becoming a pessimist. Member of opposite sex seeks sympathy. Be understanding but avoid being "used." Surprise refund could be on agenda.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get plenty of action—and you'll enjoy it. What had been a restrictive influence is now moved. There are obstacles, but you can hurdle them. You climb, elevate yourself, prove a point and gain self-satisfaction. Another Libra and an Aries could be in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): New Moon highlights travel, special studies for you. Accent also is on fresh start, original approach, added independence. You can get to heart of matters. Be direct. See beyond apparent limitations. Leo, Aquarius individuals figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your intuition works overtime. You get valid impressions, hunches. Accent is on money handled by others, including taxes. You could be "lucky" now in games of chance. Holiday atmosphere is likely to prevail.

CAPIRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Conservative course is now most constructive for you. Let others take initiative. You gain through listening, observing, planting seeds for future. You learn valuable lessons. Attention centers around legalities, formalities, signings—and partner or mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Work areas receive benefit of greater light. Specific instructions can be profitably utilized. Friend lends benefit of experience. You can exorcise yourself from emotional corner. Key is desire to "get well."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Some habit patterns will be curtailed due to budget restrictions. Key is to adjust—with humor. Member of opposite sex provides excitement, color. Be ready for change, travel, variety. Gemini, Sagittarius and Virgo persons could figure prominently.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: you have voice which can be used musically, for teaching and for impressing others with special messages, points of view. Taurus, Libra persons play important roles in your life. A new contact, exciting prospects indicated for August. If single, the year points to marriage. Married or single, you can expect additional business responsibilities.

Family Reason

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Sargent Shriver says a fear of assassination is not what is keeping his brother-in-law, Senator Edward Kennedy, out of the 1976 presidential race. Kennedy has said family considerations are keeping him from seeking the nomination. Shriver, the 1972 Democratic vice-presidential nominee, made his comments on a Connecticut radio program taped last month and aired Sunday.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

The first of three preliminary hearings scheduled this month for Daniel Bradley Cain began Monday in Victoria provincial court.

Judge William Ostler granted an order prohibiting publication of evidence at the request of Michael Hutchison, defence lawyer for 19-year-old Cain.

The preliminary hearing, scheduled for completion later today, was on two counts of kidnapping and one count each of car theft, possession of a known stolen car, criminally negligent driving and unlawful presence in a dwelling house.

The charges were laid after a seven-hour manhunt April 8.

Cain is also to appear for preliminary hearings July 22 on a three-count Victoria charge of armed robbery and another charge of escaping and being unlawfully at large from William Head. A fourth hearing of a West Vancouver holdup charge is scheduled for Sept. 11.

Harold Cotters, 27, of 1573 Begbie, who pleaded guilty to 67 traffic ticket offences, was fined $441 by Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre. The tickets were for meter offences, zone violations and parking at yellow curbs.

Steve Avram, 502 Richmond, was fined $207 after pleading guilty to 31 traffic tickets. The dates ranged from 1973 to May of this year and Avram's worst month was September, 1974, when he got 14 tickets.

Juveniles Charged In Break-Ins

Three boys were charged in juvenile court Monday with five recent break-ins in Oak Bay.

Aged 15 and 16, they were arrested Friday afternoon while attempting to enter a home in the 2600-block Lansdowne.

Oak Bay police said investigation is continuing and the boys are being questioned about five other break-ins in Oak Bay and five in Sidney.

It is the second such case in Greater Victoria in four days. Early last week, a 15-year-old boy was charged in connection with 37 break-ins in Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Colwood.

Naval Killers 'False, Absurd'

LONDON (UPI) — A U.S. Navy psychologist has denied as "blatantly false and absurd" a report that he has the job of picking assassins for duty in foreign countries.

In Washington, the navy also categorically denied the report. Lt. Cmdr. Thomas Narut said in a statement Monday he had read "with amazement and disbelief" the published account of his conversation with London Sunday Times reporter Peter Watson.

"The assertion attributed to me that convicted murderers have been assigned to embassies as assassins is totally and blatantly false and absurd," he said.

The psychologist said he "briefly discussed theoretical applications, not practical applications" in informal discussions with Watson.

Narut was summoned to London from his station at the U.S. Naval Hospital in Naples, Italy, to report to Rear Adm. Donald Enger, deputy commander of U.S. naval forces in Europe.

"I know of no U.S. Navy program, or any U.S. government program in which personnel were or are trained or conditioned for assassination assignments," Narut said. "And any other interpretation is false."

The Sunday Times said Narut told colleagues at an Oslo conference last week that his work involved computer selection of "hitmen" and "assassin" material from among navy personnel.

Hired Assassin Hunted by Yard

LONDON (Reuters) — The Guardian says Ilich Ramirez Sanchez, alleged to be Carlos — an assassin hired by the world's guerrilla groups — was believed to be in London without friends and short of money.

The newspaper, which last week reported the finding of an arms cache apparently belonging to the assassin, says an acquaintance saw Ramirez last Sunday in London.

British police have identified Ramirez, 35, a Venezuelan educated in the Soviet Union, with Carlos, the assassin who killed two French counter-espionage agents and an informer in Paris last month.

The Guardian says the acquaintance told police Ramirez had changed his appearance, discarding his glasses and wearing short hair, but she was convinced it was the same man.

The paper adds the wanted man had apparently been rejected by guerrilla comrades after the discovery of the cache and the arrest of four women by police hunting for him in France and Britain.

The paper also says Britain's bomb squad was hunting a second guerrilla "as important and dangerous as Carlos" who also used London as one of his bases.

Since the discovery of the arms cache in London, British police have arrested two women. One is Angela Otaola, 27, a Spaniard in whose apartment the weapons were found. She has been charged with possessing firearms.

The other is Maria Tobon de Romero, alleged to be a companion of Carlos. She has been charged in connection with the forging of a passport.

WARNING SIGNS NEEDED—JURY

A coroner's jury has recommended warning signs and a barrier be erected at the end of Milligan Road where it meets Kemp Lake, the scene of a fatal car accident June 14.

The recommendation was made Monday night as an inquest concluded into the death of Kathleen Joan Mallory, 20, of 1540 Mortimer.

The jury assessed no blame on the part of Wayne Lloyd Hansen, 23, of Sooke, the driver of the car that plunged into the lake.

Hansen told the inquest he and Mrs. Mallory were on their way to a friend's house after partying in Victoria earlier in the evening.

He said he thought he was on Kemp Lake Road but actually was on Milligan Road which ends abruptly at the lake.

Hansen said when he drove into the water he didn't realize where he was. Mrs. Mallory turned and asked him what they should do as the car was filling fast with water.

"Get out quick," Hansen said he replied.

After escaping from the car which came to rest in about 18 feet of water and about 50 feet from shore Hansen said he panicked.

He made one attempt to find the car then went to a nearby house, stayed there about five hours, then returned to his residence in Sooke. He reported the accident on June 17.

Mrs. Mallory was found in the front seat of the submerged car and Hansen's pet dog, Rusty, was found in the trunk. A Sooke RCMP officer surmised the dog had crawled from the back seat into the trunk as the car was sinking.

Machines don't make a rug like this. Hands do.

Our pure wool Berber rug is made by hand in India, using the centuries old flat weaving method. It's a slow way to make a rug, certainly. But a good one. Berber rugs were originally made to be passed down from generation to generation... and they still are. The rough-spun wool stands up to foot traffic as well as it did hundreds of years ago... and that's very well. And since these rugs are just as beautiful on either side, they require cleaning only half as often as ordinary carpets. Visit the Bay and see our fine collection of hand made Berber rugs. # Crown Corp. Losses 'Sucking Dry' B.C.

Losses in Crown corporation operations are "sucking dry the financial pot of B.C." at the expense of badly needed social services, Opposition leader Bill Bennett said Monday.

At a press conference called after the Socred leader toured hospital and prison facilities in the Lower Mainland, Bennett criticized the government for allowing understaffing of Oakalla Prison, Riverside Mental Hospital and Woodlands School for the Retarded.

Funds being used to cover deficits like B.C. Hydro's $21 million loss in transit operations shows the "government's inability to deal with budgets."

Losses are prompting freezes, cutbacks and non-replacement of staff and a severe restriction of services, he said.

Asked if he has statistics on staff cutbacks, the opposition leader said no, but his information was gleaned from talking to employees in the social services.

Staff commitment and competence "goes beyond the call of duty" and many employees are working overtime to "cover up the lack of government spending at this time," said Bennett.

His attack, however, was aimed mainly at Hydro, "another in the long list of declining financial situations."

Bennett expressed concern about the corporation's growing payroll with almost 800 in the engineering branch.

Hydro staff has increased from 7,800 to 11,500 in several years, he said, and management is in "shocking condition."

He predicted "a terrible financial picture next year."

He urged the government to start saving money and restrict Hydro's operation to bring costs into line.

Bennett's comments were sparked by the company's annual report which indicated net income totalled $3.3 million for the fiscal year ended March 31, down 75 per cent from $14.2 million the previous year.

Bennett wouldn't commit himself, when asked whether the Socreds if elected would cut staff to decrease costs. But he insisted the NDP government has to impose some financial restraint.

Bennett also criticized Barrett for "putting the cart before the horse" by getting financial assistance from Britain for the province's proposed oil refinery, without assurance of oil supplies.

"I haven't seen any report to justify an oil refinery and the government shouldn't proceed with a refinery without conclusive evidence of supply and demand," he said.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Workers from the Tofino Fisheries Ltd. packing plant which went into receivership early in June are being paid money owing them and have allowed a Japanese fishing company to move 250 tons of herring and $90,000 worth of roe out of the plant.

About 60 workers were laid off in May without proper pay cheques.

Don Jacques, agent for the receiver, said Monday that about $70,000 was owed in wages.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 213, began picketing Woodward's downtown store Monday.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 213, began picketing Woodward's downtown store Monday.

Cliff Rundgren, a union spokesman, said the workers are protesting company policy not to retrain the workers after deciding to bring in about $10 million of new electronic cash register equipment.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Real estate broker George O. Treit of Vancouver pleaded guilty in provincial court Monday to evading payment of taxes on unreported income of $66,833 between Dec. 31, 1969, and May 1, 1973. Treit, president of two companies, will be sentenced July 17.

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Railway said Monday it has applied for the assistance of a government mediator in contract negotiations with engineers. The company is negotiating with 11 unions on contract expiring July 31.

Beer Import Okayed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jack Chapelas, a spokesman for the brewery workers union, said Monday the striking union will allow breweries other than Molson outside B.C. to ship in draught and bottled beer.

He said hundreds of hotel workers have been put out of work by the eight-week strike and allowing beer to come in hopefully will help many of them get their jobs back.

About a dozen Vancouver area beer parlors committed to Molson draft have closed so far and others elsewhere in the province have also had to close because of beer shortages.

Chapelas said the move is unusual and "we don't normally allow it."

However, he said the company has shown no inclination to resume bargaining and the move could help a lot of workers get their jobs back.

Lloyd Manuel, executive vice-president of the B.C. Hotel Association, said he expects the move will help his members.

Chapelas also said the last offer from the company would have left the 165 workers 55 to 57 cents an hour behind other brewery workers. While the rates are not the same, they are always close, he said.

The last contract expired April 20. The base rate is $5.77.

Pulp, Paper Walkout Illegal, Firm Says

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Pulp and Paper Labor Relations Bureau went to British Columbia Labor Relations Board Monday to have a walkout by members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada at a Kamloops pulp mill declared an illegal strike.

The 470 union members walked off the job Saturday at the Weyerhaeuser Canada

Ltd. pulp mill in the interior city.

Keith Bennett, an industry spokesman, said the dispute involved a union overtime ban.

The union, meanwhile, said the company locked out the workers. Union members were to meet tonight to consider their position. The union's 72-hour strike notice expired at the mill Monday, making a legal walkout possible.

Elsewhere in the province's massive forest industry, 500 loggers, members of the International Woodworkers of America, were off the job Monday at Canadian Forest Products Ingleside operation on the east coast of Vancouver Island.

Forest Industrial Relations, representing the coast forest companies, said it did not know why the men walked out but an IWA spokesman said the walkout was related to a fire closure in the area.

PPWC members at Canadian Forest Products' Wood-fibre pulp mill on Howe Sound were off work in what the company said was an inventory correction. Only a few employees were to have been kept on for maintenance work, but Reg Ginn, PPWC spokesman, said there was enough work for the entire complement of 420 workers.

The operation was shut down, and Mr. Ginn said no union members would work until the company guaranteed work for all employees.

The IWA, PPWC and the Canadian Paperworkers Union still have not set a strike date, although strike notice has expired. No negotiations are scheduled between the unions and FIR.

IWA, Four Mills Near Settlement

VANCOUVER (CP) — A tentative agreement was reached Monday in the three-month strike of International Woodworkers of America members at four millwork companies represented by Construction Labor Relations Association.

A union spokesman said workers were to meet Monday night to vote on the settlement. No details were released.

The union went on strike against Sigurdson Millwork and Alex Gair and Sons and CLRA locked the union out at Fraser Sash and Door and Custom Millwork of North Vancouver. About 150 workers are involved.

The last contract expired March 31 when top millwork journeymen were earning $6.70 an hour.

ALBERTA LIBERAL RAPS BARRETT

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta Liberal leader Nick Taylor said today Premier Dave Barrett is exhibiting a "backwoods" mentality in thinking that engineering firms from overseas are better than firms available in Canada.

In a prepared release, Taylor said he has written to Prime Minister Trudeau asking him to stop Barrett from awarding the engineering of a proposed $350-million government-owned refinery in B.C. to British engineers.

He said there were many engineering firms in Canada, especially in Alberta, that could handle the engineering of a refinery in B.C.

He said it was "the height of hypocrisy" for a leader of the NDP to contract British engineers to do a refinery job here in Canada.

Taylor added that Barrett showed "alarming naivete" about engineering, saying he should know that engineers can draw the specifications for a project in such a way that bidding can only be done on certain parts by certain firms throughout the world.

Lang Appoints Judges for B.C.

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang announced Monday the appointment of several British Columbia county court judges because of the creation of five additional positions in the province and the retirement of Judge E. W. Kennedy of Prince George.

John Spencer, 45, of Vancouver and Allan Macdonell, 47, of Prince Rupert have been appointed to new county court positions in Vancouver, the minister said in a news release. A third new county court position in Vancouver remains vacant.

Peter Millward, 49, of Kamloops will fill the new county court position in Nanaimo. The new position in New Westminster is to be filled by re-appointment of Judge A. S. McMorran, now serving as a county court judge in Cariboo County.

Judge Frank Perry of the provincial court in Prince George has been appointed to replace Judge McMorran in the Cariboo County Court.

The minister also announced the appointment of Ross Lander, 43, to the county court of Cariboo, to replace Judge R. W. Kennedy who retired July 9.

'A Real Victory' For Brown In NDP Contest

WINNIPEG (CP) — When the final vote was tallied Monday there were no admitted losers in the New Democratic Party leadership contest.

"We won, we won," shouted a Rosemary Brown supporter when it was announced that Ed Broadbent defeated the black radical feminist by a fourth-ballot vote of 948 to 638.

Brown described her strong showing as "a real victory" against the party's so-called establishment. It was evident that delegates "want the party to take very definite, very strong socialist positions."

"I think Ed got the message," said Brown, who became the first black woman elected in Canada when she won a British Columbia legislature seat in 1972.

Brown campaigner Hilda Thomas of Vancouver was elated.

"We were all amateurs when we started the campaign in February. Just look at us now."

The same could be said for Toronto professor John Harey and Yorkton-Melville MP Lorne Nystrom, who mounted strong campaigns against the favored Broadbent, parliamentary leader of the NDP since the 1974 election defeat of his predecessor, David Lewis.

Win Cost $14,500

WINNIPEG (CP) — It cost Ed Broadbent at least $14,500 to win the national leadership of the New Democratic Party, preliminary figures show.

Interim expense statements presented at the party's convention Monday show that Broadbent's campaign cost $14,501.38 compared with $3,454 for runner-up Rosemary Brown.

Last week Town Talk told how "Skip" Whitfield had found a curious medallion engraved "The Tail-Waggers Club" while digging in his garden. Who knows anything about such a club? we asked.

Well, quite a few people recall it from several decades ago in Britain.

Mrs. Alice Comber of 1524 Pembroke even has an old certificate enrolling her sister-in-law's dog. It's signed by registrar A. Barker in Barking, Hmnm.

Mr. and Mrs. Geoff Horridge of 1512 Winchester recall the club for pet owners as a sort of registry and have the impression it was sponsored, in part at least, by a firm dealing in pet supplies.

The clubs were all over England and promoted care for dogs.

Mrs. Rena Wright of 440 Simcoe recalls making annual contributions because it was like the PDSA, People's Dispensary for Sick Animals.

Wives of Saanich policemen don't sleep easily when their husbands are on night patrol with a woman police officer, according to Ald. Sandy Noel.

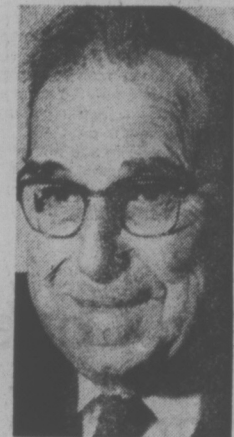

Amid guffaws and giggles at Monday's council meeting, Noel quickly explained the wives don't fear any hanky-panky but worry because their husbands had no brawn to back them up in a tight situation.

"A policeman would feel a lot more secure with 180 pounds of brawn to back him up," he said, adding that night patrols could bring dangerous confrontations for the police.

Noel said he realized there was room for women on the force and when they graduated from the police academy they often had high marks, were trained in judo and also carried firearms.

But Noel said he was "very disenchanted" with the practice of having women officers on night patrol. He asked for a survey to determine how many policemen felt the same way.

If he finds he's alone in his concern, Noel has promised to make a public apology to the women on the force. Saanich has three women police officers.

Coffee elsewhere on campus costs 15 and 20 cents. Prices will rise slightly this year on some SUB food items, said Shold.

When North Saanich municipal workers seeded the new McDonald Park Road boulevard earlier this year, they were expecting a good crop of green grass for their efforts.

Instead they got a good crop of yellow mustard.

Two workers were sent out last week to mow the weed, but not before several residents of the area started wondering if the municipality or the seed wholesaler had goofed and mixed up grass seed with mustard seed.

Municipal Administrator Ted Fairs says the mustard seed may have just drifted in from neighboring fields, or it might have come mixed in with the grass seed.

But the stuff has now been mowed and the municipality is hoping for a green instead of yellow boulevard next year.

Few, if any, of the 180 ensigns aboard the two Japanese ships Katori and Yamagumo that left here Monday for Vancouver know that one of their comrades is buried in the naval cemetery in Esquimalt, where Rear-Admiral Eiji Tsunehiro laid a wreath on Saturday.

Midshipman H. Kusano, believed to be 23, was buried there on Nov. 14, 1892. He had been serving aboard His Imperial Majesty's ship Congo at the time. The cause of his death is not known.

A news story out of Washington, D.C., says: "Unmarried and married servicewomen who become pregnant automatically will be allowed to remain in the military under a new Pentagon policy..."

Automatically? It's the age of automation to be sure.

But pregnancy by whatever means, what's the policy in the Canadian armed forces?

A spokesman at Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt, advises that Canadian servicewomen who become pregnant need not resign unless they choose but they must take 15 weeks leave without pay. During that time they receive full medical coverage and can apply for unemployment benefits — which shows how much the military has to learn about the trials and tribulations of diaper-changing.

There is no differentiation between married and unmarried servicewomen as far as the military regulations go.

The ceremony will be held on the Naden parade square at 2:30 p.m.

Pickford took over at Esquimalt on June 21, 1973.

Saanich 'Cornered' by Gov't

Saanich was backed into a corner by provincial government policy over hefty increases in policemen's salaries, council was told Monday.

Municipal solicitor D. A. M. Patterson, on the request of Mayor Ed Lum, explained that the Police Act made policemen employees of provincial government-appointed police boards, not municipalities.

Lum said today the salaries negotiated with the force had been allowed for in earlier budget sessions. The increases had been recommended by the police board.

The mayor said the increases were in line with those awarded Canadian Union of Public Employees members and, therefore, council had not opposed them.

If the increases had been considered too high by council, Lum said Saanich could have appealed to the B.C. Police Commission. The commission, however, could turn down a municipality's appeal.

Patterson's explanation came after Ald. Fred Severson said council had been "unfairly attacked" by other councils for giving policemen an average 22.28 increase.

Lum said the provincial government had set the pattern for large wage hikes and forced the settlement on Saanich.

"They gave their sheriff deputies $200 more than our probation constables," Lum said.

Severson took exception to Lum's recent article, blaming Saanich council for the large salary increases.

Ald. Mel Couveller noted, "He (Hunter) is notorious for not doing his homework."

Couveller said as early as February council had written the provincial government, stating the financial burden for policing was too high for municipalities to carry alone.

Lum said because of the "mobility of criminals today" he shared Attorney-General Alex Macdonald's conviction that the federal government should shoulder 50 per cent of the cost of policing.

Lum said criticism of the settlement by Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen was triggered by jealousy.

"This is the first time Saanich has come up with a contract first," Lum asserted. "The city has been tardy. The mayor (Pollen) has been away for quite a few months this year already."

NEW HOME NEEDED FOR TREASURES

Maltwood Closed Forever

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Times Staff

The University of Victoria's stately Maltwood Museum in Royal Oak with its priceless historical art works is closed permanently to the public.

Exhibitions run each summer have cost UVic too much money and contributed to damaging the valuable works, honorary curator Martin Segger said today.

Sunlight and humidity have ruined some of the items beyond repair, and the museum has been closed for restoration of other treasures.

Although 2,000-3,000 people visit the museum each summer it will have to be closed down permanently and more suitable building facilities, found, said Segger.

"Maltwood was never constructed as a museum," he said.

The building allows for no control of humidity or natural light, both of which destroy aging art works, he said.

He pointed out an Oriental wall hanging from the early Ming dynasty with fabric that has cracked because of the effects of natural light.

"These kinds of things would keep marvelously in an 18th century castle that isn't heated. That's the irony of it," he said.

The fate of the building willed to the university by Katharine Maltwood has not been decided — but the terms of the will say it must be used for historical artifacts.

A suggestion was recently made at a UVic board of governors meeting that the terms of the will be changed and the building sold.

Segger said the restoration process will take at least two years, and some of the pieces including a water-damaged Chinese ancestor portrait about 200 years old can only be restored by an expert in Ottawa's National Art Gallery.

Seatbelts Called No Rights Issue

Mandatory use of car seatbelts isn't a civil rights issue, Dave Robertson of Vancouver, president of the B.C. Civil Liberties Association, said Monday.

He was responding to Capital Region Safety Council manager Colin Barker who said a compulsory seatbelt law in B.C. could be opposed by civil liberties groups.

A provincial government departmental committee said last week the law is inevitable.

But Robertson said driving without seatbelts doesn't rank along with life and liberty as a basic human right.

He wouldn't consider a mandatory seatbelt law a violation of civil liberties.

"Everybody accepts that the government should legislate in that field for public safety. When you take out a driver's licence you automatically accept the regulations that go along with it," said Robertson.

He said mandatory seatbelts would be no more a violation of freedom than traffic lights.

His association recognizes the need for laws and does not object to government safety regulations, he said.

Condominium Block Replaces Hospital

A 70-unit condominium block will replace the Cedars Private Hospital on Menzies which has fallen to the bulldozer.

The building, three stories over a concrete parking garage, is now in the planning stages.

Property owner Neil de Macedo refused to say today what provision was made for the former residents of the hospital.

"I'm just not going to make any comment," he said. "It's none of your business really."

De Macedo sold Aberdeen Private Hospital, 1450 Hillside, to the provincial government in March for $1.1 million following his announcement that the hospital would close in May, leaving its 93 residents without care.

Eggs Going Up Next Week

A three-cents-a-dozen producer price increase for eggs is expected to be reflected in retail stores here this week.

Egg producers were granted 75 cents for A large, 70 cents for A medium and 49 cents for A small by B.C. Egg Marketing Board. The raise was effective Monday.

In Vancouver, where eggs bring one cent a dozen less to producers, a spokesman for the board said the official increase would be undermined if dissident egg producers undercut prices in a campaign against marketing board regulation.

The raise was allowed as a result of declining supply brought on by new U.S. limits on imports and a reduction of flocks under Canadian Egg Marketing Agency rules. A half-dozen dissidents with flocks larger than CEMA permits have refused head counts by inspectors.

The spokesman said the Egg Marketing Board has the legal power to set all producer egg prices in the province and CEMA regulations were designed to stabilize and keep farm incomes up.

Q. My husband and I retired here a few months ago from Alberta. When we saw our first Victoria Day Parade we were impressed by the size of some of the marching bands, particularly the American ones. Were they unusually large or was this a special feature of this year's parade? L.N.

A. They may have been larger than usual because of this year's theme, Music. Certainly, there were more bands in the parade than ever before. The Americans, as you have guessed, have a penchant for large mass bands. There were 1,876 musicians and 54 drum majors, flag bearers and directors in the band that marched two miles down Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington for former President Nixon's second inaugural parade on Jan. 20, 1973.

Brewery Switching Sought

B.C. hotelkeepers have applied to the Liquor Administration Branch for permission to switch to alternative brewers during a strike of Molson's brewery which has cut supplies of draught beer to 50 pubs.

Patrick Hungenberg, president of the Victoria section of B.C. Hotel Association, said "wheels are in motion" to have the LAB consider the application that would help the struggling hotels to survive.

Regulations forbid hotels changing their source of draft beer supply except after serving notice at specified times.

None of the 50 hotels normally supplied by Molson's is believed to have closed, but the serving meanwhile of bottled beer has been barely sufficient to keep them open.

Five of the pubs affected are in Greater Victoria: Kings, Century Inn, Gorge, Goldstream and Tudor House.

Meanwhile, the situation is further aggravated by a shortage of bottled beer caused by the Molson shut-down and heavier consumer demand at liquor stores and pubs. Some pubs have stopped selling bottled beer for off-licence consumption.

Both government liquor stores and hotel pubs are on a quota basis for the supply of bottled beer during the current situation, the supply being restricted to 20 per cent of normal consumption.

One hotel manager said others in the association would like the LAB to seek supplies of surplus beer from other provinces and Washington until the B.C. brewing industry returns to normal.

Some 'Tea' for Your Garden

It's here — gardening time again — and most likely you're spending a good part of every day out there in the vegetable patch, urging on your crops.

How well those crops do, of course, depends on the state of the ground you tuckered them into. Some important first steps toward a good harvest were taken way back last fall when (hopefully) you mulched the soil heavily, planted it to a green manure crop or treated it to several good loads of animal droppings.

And, naturally, you'll have added a good compost, kitchen scraps and other organic fertilizer to the plot's surface and subsurface to ensure even greater fertility.

All the same, you may find that some parts of your garden need extra help as the summer goes on. Many plants (notably the vine crops and cereal grains) are deep, heavy feeders that make severe demands on even highly fertile soils. During their period of greatest productivity, they may require additional nutrition in the form of readily assimilated organic fertilizers.

Liquids — which rapidly penetrate to the vicinity of the roots and are taken up almost immediately — are the easiest foods for plants to absorb. A number of concentrated liquid organic fertilizers are available commercially and can be used to supply the vital nutrients in the form best utilized by your crops.

If you prefer, though, you can offer your garden an excellent liquid fertilizer without purchasing any such products. It's called "manure tea," and to make it you need only a supply of animal droppings and a device which you can put together at no cost by means of careful scrounging.

For starters, you'll need a discarded 50-gallon oil drum. Cut the top out and scrub the inside well to remove any trace of oil residue. Add a spigot; you may want to have it brazed permanently to the barrel.

Concrete blocks, chicken wire, fine wire screening and wood for the cover can all be salvaged from various repairs around your homestead. Manure — in excess of what the teapot will need for a summer's feeding — is usually available just for the cost of hauling.

The manure teapot can be put together in a weekend without much effort and be producing rich, dark liquid fertilizer in short order.

Operation of the device is equally simple. Fill the barrel about one-fourth full of straw (preferably well rotted, to add its own bit of nourishment to the brew). This layer serves to filter the liquid and keep the manure from clogging the drain. Upon its top, place a circular piece of chicken wire weighted with a brick or stone to prevent the straw from floating.

Next, shovel either fresh or dry manure into the drum until it's half full. (You may have to fill the container to the three-quarters level if the droppings are quite dry, or the fertilizer won't be of sufficient strength.) Then add warm water almost to the container's top (fluid from a pond or lake is recommended because its multitude of life will further enrich the "tea").

Open the barrel's spigot, allow the darkening liquid to run into a bucket, dump it back into the drum... and repeat until the "teapot's" contents have circulated at least three times through the manure and straw. Finally, close the container with its wooden top and let it set in the sun for a few days.

During the waiting period, the manure and straw will decompose rapidly and the liquid will take on a dark-brown color. Suspended in the water will be millions of tiny particles of food for your growing plants. The longer the brew stands, the richer the fertilizer will be.

After even two or three days in the sun, the "tea" you draw off to feed the crops may have to be diluted in order not to burn the roots. (Pond water is recommended for this purpose also.) It's best to fertilize twice a week, with fluid of a light-brown color.

After all the brew has been drained from the "pot" and used on the garden, the barrel should be thoroughly cleaned and recharged. It's not necessary to scrub out the inside, but try to remove all the old straw and manure and add them to the compost pile.

The few inches of liquid that remain in the very bottom will be highly concentrated. Save this and add it to the container after refilling the drum with pond water.

Although the "tea" you brew in this contraption isn't the kind that delights the human connoisseur, it's nevertheless relished by hungry, deep-feeding plants... and instead of marveling at your brew with meaningless adjectives, the crops will silently reward you with delicious food.

Males Not Immune To Middle-Aged Change of Life

By United Press International

Something's happened to Joe, once a champion girl watcher.

Down at the factory he hasn't put a new pin-up on his locker door for months.

When "Playboy" arrives at home Joe takes his good old time getting to the centrefold.

Sometimes for no reason he gets chilled preceded or followed by hot spells.

His wife notices that Joe's not his usual peppy, teasing self-confident self.

Is Joe cracking up — or what?

There's a good chance Joe is going through the male climacteric — change of life. In susceptible males, there are some of the very symptoms that grip women in menopause.

The climacteric happens to many between the ages of 45 and 60. When it strikes there are varying degrees of physical, sexual and emotional changes.

These changes can affect a man's family and working relationships. It helps men in this age bracket to be aware of a change of life might creep up.

The points were made in an interview with Dr. Helmut J. Ruebsaat, who said:

"I know about this. I went through the whole bit."

The specialist in family medicine from Vancouver, said he has become increasingly involved with the problems of men experiencing the climacteric.

"I'm 55 now," he said, "and now that I'm through my change I feel this is the very best age."

Along with author Raymond Hull, who also lives in Vancouver, Dr. Ruebsaat has put out "The Male Climacteric" (Hawthorn).

The two tell "how to understand and cope with the often unpleasant social, physical and psychological effects of the male change of life."

Hull, whose previous books included "The Peter Principle," describes his own climacteric in the introduction.

The author charted swings in moods and unpleasant physical feelings — including bloating. He found a cyclical pattern. The cycle varied over a year but for the most part tended to span 45 days.

His report on one period of distress in a typical 45-day cycle: "These symptoms began on the afternoon of Saturday, Sept. 5; alternate hot and cold spells, depression, brief feelings of going crazy and gain of weight, apparently caused by water retention, because I did not eat more than usual."

"The symptoms reached their height on Monday, Sept. 7, and had almost disappeared by the afternoon of Wednesday, Sept. 9."

"During this time I felt unable to think clearly or act decisively. I could do no useful writing. I did not feel much like meeting or talking to people."

Later he bought a thermometer and took his temperature each morning. He found at the time of the first symptoms, his temperature was elevated, high above normal. Immediately after the symptoms disappeared the temperature returned to normal.

Keeping records of his moods, Hull found another unusual thing. To wit:

"Just at the time when, after a few days, the symptoms pass off, I'm in an extraordinary mirthful mood; I will howl with laughter over someone's little witticism, over a book, or the radio something that normally would barely raise a smile."

"This elated mood lasts for perhaps a few hours; then I settle back into my normal calm, easy-going temperament for another five or six weeks until the next spell of physical symptoms and depression begins."

Dr. Ruebsaat prefers to call the male change climacteric rather than menopause.

Both the menopause and the climacteric are caused by physiological aging processes that may be complicated by psychological and social problems.

"But menopause is inevitable for females, and only part of the male population is afflicted with the climacteric," Dr. Ruebsaat said.

"Furthermore while the climacteric is often accompanied by a decline in sexual ability, this is not so in the case of the menopause."

He believes about three fourths of the men who go through the climacteric are in their forties. The rest are older. Symptoms vary but in some men infidelity in marriage is a sign.

"After many years of fidelity, they start chasing other women, often younger ones."

"Other men, to all appearances heterosexual, will at the climacteric turn to homosexuality."

Other symptoms: A man may become rude, short-tempered, impatient, with his wife and children and even physically cruel to them.

— Some men, formerly alert, decisive and active, become absent-minded, careless and procrastinating. Tasks that used to be easy become tiresome."

The most difficult problem in coping with the climacteric, according to Dr. Ruebsaat, is to get men to recognize that they may be susceptible to it — something many are not willing to do.

"And doctors have not been very helpful in this respect," he said, "especially where sexual symptoms are involved."

New Way to Cope With Cataracts

By DEBORAH PHELAN

MONTREAL (CP) — Only two weeks after Lillian Nathan had an artificial lens implanted in her eye, she was able to drive a car and read the fine print in newspapers — with even better vision than she had before developing a cataract.

She had undergone an operation which was a modification of the traditional technique for the removal of cataracts.

Developed in recent years by a small group of international eye specialists, the operation was first performed successfully in Canada by Montreal ophthalmologist Dr. Marvin Kwitko almost 10 years ago. The first transplant in a human had been preceded by several years of animal research.

While the technique still is controversial, Dr. Kwitko said in an interview, "it is gaining recognition as a promising method for treating cataract patients."

However, said the Montreal eye specialist, the operation cannot be performed in all cases where vision is impaired by cataracts.

He suggested patients should consult with their own eye surgeon who will advise them because this method now is performed in several Canadian medical centres.

Cataracts pose one of the major problems as people become older. The lens — that part of the eye which focuses the rays of light and allows a person to see — eventually becomes opaque.

The standard operation removes the cataract but leaves the patient with limited vision which must be corrected by heavy cataract glasses or tiny contact lenses, themselves difficult for older people to manipulate.

In the new operation, after the cloudy lens is removed it is replaced with a small lens made of a special form of hard plastic, restoring to the eye the vision it had before the cataract developed.

success the new lens is — with even better vision than she had before developing a cataract.

To be assured of maximum success the new lens is handmade and placed in a tissue culture for three months to test for acceptance or rejection.

Until several years ago, the lens transplant technique still was experimental and Dr. Kwitko would do the operation only if it was completely impossible for the patient to wear glasses or contact lenses.

Early research into the operation began in Holland in 1958 by Dr. Cornelius Binkhorst and grew into a co-operative study with ophthalmologists in England, South Africa, the Soviet Union, the United States and Canada.

A small international organization of these eye surgeons was formed and now meets every two years to discuss advances in the field of cataract

Jail Luxurious

NEW YORK (AP) — A new $15-million federal jail has opened with central air-conditioning, closed-circuit television, carpeted corridors and no bars at the specially-strengthened clear plastic windows. The 12-storey Metropolitan Correctional Centre has single-occupancy cells and a recreation room for every 48 cells. It is part of the new Federal Plaza centre near city hall and is designed to replace the old Federal House of Detention, which had a notorious record of escapes.

HAND-ME-DOWNS WITH FANCY LABELS

DALLAS (AP) — A clothing store has opened here specializing in chic hand-me-down fashions.

The Anonymous Clothes Horse is an exclusive resale shop where rich folks can sell their castoff dresses.

Nancy Ungertman and Jan Kennedy started the service 1½ years ago with the encouragement of their lawyer-husbands. Business is so good they had to move into larger quarters and add a men's section.

"People are very, very conscious of spending their money no matter how much they have," said Mrs. Ungertman. She said most of her customers are "smart business-women on the go" who need a varied wardrobe to match their varied interests.

The process is confidential to protect both the buyer and the seller. A seller must have at least seven items that originally retailed for at least $100 each and are no more than two years old. If the garment is sold, the store splits the money 50-50 with the seller.

The shop owners say they cannot disclose any of the original owners' names, but they will tactfully hint when a buyer unwittingly tries to purchase clothes that belonged to a close associate.

Consumers Fight Back

NEW YORK (UPI) — We're living in a "customer-ent-supermarket" society in which the consumer feels cornered and manipulated and is fighting back.

She fighting back by taking back, not just one item but sometimes a whole bagful of groceries because she feels she's overcharged. She's cutting down, cutting out, substituting cheaper products, serving simpler meals, bragging that she sets a thrifty table.

She's buying the small package, making shopping lists and sticking to them, taking no extra money to market, adding up the purchases as she goes and stops when she reaches the limit of funds, and comparison shopping within the store and from store to store.

This consumer is a paradox. She's an activist on one hand, but on the other feeling helpless to fight the inflation eating into her household budget.

One group studying today's consumer sees her as actually "dangerous—one who needs a great deal of attention."

She doesn't dress up to go to the supermarket. She "dresses for battle" instead, putting on her oldest clothes... puts her hair in rollers so it'll be ready for the more pleasant part of her day...

The portrait of "the changing consumer" is drawn by Woman's Day, a monthly magazine, which has done group interviews with women between January and April of this year, sampled its reader mail, and drawn from other consumer studies for its findings.

They were presented first at a supermarket institute convention in Dallas and since have been given to other interested companies and groups. During the sight, sound and action presentation were Geraldine E. Rhoads, the magazine's editor, Jeanne Voltz, food editor, and Karlys Daly, beauty editor.

The focus of the studies was on supermarkets, where a big chunk of the consumer dollar is spent.

One woman answered simply, "help!" when asked to describe her feelings about the economy today.

But Mrs. Rhoads said most women are vociferous, angry, frustrated, and fighting back. The sellers had better listen.

"She's resentful when she walks in your door," Miss Rhoads told a New York audience. "So when she sees a price on top of another price on top of an earlier price, she's livid."

And more worry for the retailer, the woman no longer enjoys shopping.

One study in the 1960s involved 15,000 women. Asked what housewifely chores they enjoyed most, they put shopping at the top of the list.

Six weeks ago when Woman's Day asked women in San Jose how they felt about supermarket shopping, the answer was a chorus of "yuk. Yuck."

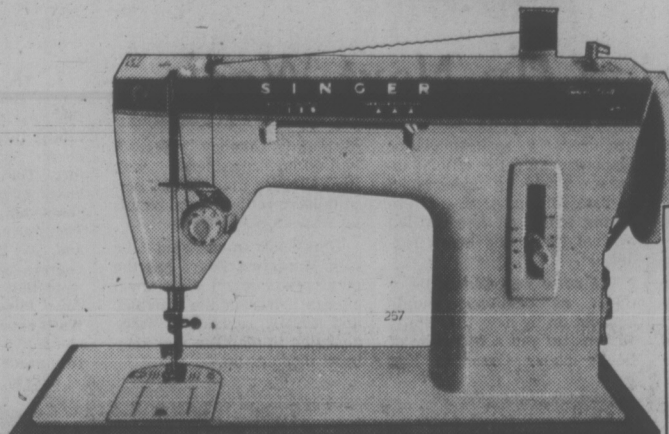

Some other points that stood out in the studies were:

—"Ten years from now the table may have a new look—moderation," said Mrs. Voltz. "Like the airlines the women are cutting out the frills, and for the same reason. Money."

Women are saving on the food bill by baking, gardening, canning, and entertaining at home more—but with less. "They don't invite friends over for roast beef, but for coffee and dessert... or coffee and bagels."

—For all her budgeting on the necessities, sometimes a woman just has to splurge on a luxury. Said Mrs. Daly, "fascinating isn't it? A woman carries a whole bag of groceries back to a store because she feels she's been overcharged... but show her an ounce of perfume and she says price doesn't matter."

Close-up pictures of small things such as flowers, coins, figurines and other interesting items are fascinating to view because they reveal all the intricate details which make these items so attractive.

The 12-page illustrated booklet Close-up pictures with 35 mm cameras states that to take truly impressive close-ups you should be able to get nearer to your subject than the usual 2½ to 3 feet. To do this you will need close-up lenses or, if your camera is designed to accept them, extension tubes or bellows.

The booklet points out that the advantage of using close-up lenses is that you can take your pictures with normal exposure. Close-up lenses come in different strengths. The higher the number of the lens, the closer you can get to the subject.

Since in close-up picture-taking the depth of field is very shallow, focusing is critical. Therefore the distance between lens and subject has to be measured exactly. You can of course use a ruler, but, according to the booklet, it is much simpler to carry a piece of string which you have measured beforehand. Tie one end of the string to your adapter ring. Then tie a knot in the string at the correct focusing distance for each close-up lens and the distance setting you plan to use.

You will also find instructions how to make a cardboard measuring device and a focal frame to show the area that will be in the picture.

DODGING THE GOUGERS

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Europe costs considerably more than $5 a day for anyone who eats out in Paris, has clothes dry cleaned in Stockholm and buys a bottle of Scotch in Oslo, a cost-of-living survey says.

The survey by Business International said London charges the most for one night in an American-style hotel and a man's suit costs the most in Geneva.

Athens and Dublin were found to be the cheapest places for most items except for Milan, where Scotch costs less than anywhere else.

Business International listed the three most expensive and the three most reasonable cities for each category as follows:

—Three-course dinner for four: most expensive Paris, The Hague, Stockholm; least expensive Athens, Rome, Dublin.

—Two-bedroom unfurnished apartment: most expensive Paris, London, Zurich; least expensive Dublin, Brussels, The Hague.

—Single room at a good hotel: most expensive London, Amsterdam and Paris; least expensive Dublin, Madrid, Barcelona.

—Live-in maid: most expensive Stockholm, The Hague and Copenhagen; least expensive Lisbon, Madrid and Dublin.

—Women's ready-to-wear dress: Paris, Geneva and Zurich at the top of the scale; Dublin, Athens and Brussels the cheapest.

—Man's two-piece ready-made business suit: Most expensive Geneva, Paris and Copenhagen, least expensive Dublin, Rome and Milan.

—Dry cleaning a man's suit: Stockholm, Oslo and Copenhagen the costliest, Athens, Dublin and London the cheapest.

A bottle of Scotch: Oslo, Stockholm and Copenhagen at the top, Milan-Rome, London and The Hague at the bottom.

Male-Oriented Jail System Unfair to Female Offenders

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — A drastic reassessment of the penal system, especially as it affects women, is overdue in the fight to suppress crime, says a woman who works with female offenders.

Barbara Unroe, co-ordinator of Unison, an agency established to meet the needs of women in difficulty with the law, says society has allowed itself to sit back and let professionals try to work out the problems.

"In fact, it would be an impossible task for so few to accomplish so much," she said in an interview.

Miss Unroe noted that one of the oddities of the situation is that the process of adjudicating the female offender is carried out "by people—men—who have no idea whatsoever of the trials and tribulations of the individual."

Judges were usually lenient with female first offenders because they saw the stereotype of motherhood but if offences persisted, the judgments became harsher.

Once in prison, the system does "not look at why a woman, for instance, turned to prostitution or what her alternatives were, but rather put her into programs thought best for the institution, she said.

Society, generally, equated a sense of power with these qualifications and "it is hard for a judge to identify with a woman who has stepped outside the moral boundaries of the middle and upper class."

Volunteer services were needed to help those in prison. "As long as we remain separated from those in prison, nothing will happen. However, when a person gets to know another intimately, then he can begin to see the injustices."

Society would have to work with those in institutions using its power "to help the inmates gain their own."

No attention was paid to the cultural background or needs of the individual.

Miss Unroe said it is unrealistic to think that women will come out of prison prepared to live a normal life when life in prison is so abnormal.

Working on the theory that if a little is good, a lot is better, it is usually given in what are referred to as "massive" doses. Since B12 in its authentic role is effective in amounts measured in micrograms (one-thousandth of a milligram), a massive dose is hardly enough to cover the point of a pin.

B12 is, in fact, a very important, albeit very limited, biological entity. It is what two distinguished Boston doctors found, without realizing at the time the entire importance of their discovery, when they came upon the fact that there was something in liver which could cure pernicious anemia. They were awarded a Nobel prize, and pernicious anemia, which up to that time had been uniformly fatal, became a curable disease.

Vitamin B12 is essential for cell multiplication and for normal functioning of the nervous system. Symptoms of its deficiency may be vague and include: fatigue, irritability, numbness and tingling of the extremities, and problems with thinking. There may or may not be anemia along with these symptoms, but when it is present, it is of a special variety and sometimes can be quite severe.

With such a range of non-specific symptoms, it is not surprising that B12 shots found a place in the treatment of patients who are vaguely ill, worried but well, or are

Dr. Frymire questioned whether teachers are moving toward an assembly-line mentality by forcing upon themselves conditions of work that insist on uniformity and minimum choice.

MENTALLY RETARDED GAIN FROM MIXING

VANCOUVER (CP) — The retarded child has long been regarded by society with either fear or ridicule, avoided or packed off to an institution where he spends his days with others so handicapped.

But an experimental program in three Vancouver elementary schools may be changing these attitudes, helping the mentally retarded child to become accepted by other children and society in general.

Classrooms of trainable mentally retarded children are operating in the same school as regular classes with the goal of establishing a broader understanding of these children within the community.

Changes in attitudes are more easily accomplished at an early age. The retarded children are being accepted among many of their age peers, an indication that the socialization program has been successful. Adults are involved in the program change, too.

At the child level, "open affection radiates now from the children closely involved in helping their retarded friends," said Hal Lafavor, principal of one of the schools involved.

"The learning is going two ways," he said. "We are all slow, learning the value of each individual. Fortunately, the affection is catching."

Statistics Canada 1971 recorded a retarded population of more than 65,000 in B.C., three per cent of the population.

Of these, one per cent are profoundly retarded and require institutional care. Four per cent are severely retarded, but trainable.

The trainable mentally retarded person is handicapped by sub-normal intelligence but can be expected to learn basic self care, to adjust to home and neighborhood, and to learn some economic usefulness in his home, a sheltered workshop or institution.

It now is believed that a retarded child should, wherever possible, be integrated into a regular school system in his own community. Some children are capable of reaching a more interactive place and should be encouraged and educated to do so.

Some common characteristics of a retarded child create difficulties in a teaching situation. The children tend to be slow and dependent in many ways. People form low expectations of them and tend to wait on them unnecessarily. Their attention span is short. Constant repetition using concrete and tangible objects is necessary to drill even the simplest concepts into their minds. Some are hyper-active and over-imaginative while others show no imagination and are lethargic.

Each teacher involved in the integration program has the opportunity to return to more appropriate facilities the children who cannot fit in with the new demands.

"It sometimes seems you'll never make any headway, that there's no glimmer of hope," said one teacher a month after a school year started. "One boy is just not fitting in. Let me help him just one more month to see if I can't do something with him."

One month later, the situation was not much improved for that child. "I've noticed a spark of interest," she reported. "Let's give him a little more time."

Nearly two years later, this same child is capable of reading with understanding.

Prof. Warns Of Rigidity In Education

EDMONTON (CP) — Restrictive, control-oriented education is producing dependence and sameness in children, University of Ohio professor Dr. Jack Frymire told a seminar on issues in Education at the University of Alberta Monday.

"Many people want schools to be rigid, tough," he said, pointing out that a large minority of people are calling for a return to the three Rs, reading, writing and arithmetic.

He said with this method teachers lack creativity and flexibility. If the one method fails, they don't try something else.

Dr. Frymire questioned whether teachers are moving toward an assembly-line mentality by forcing upon themselves conditions of work that insist on uniformity and minimum choice.

Why Did She Write?

DEAR ABBY: I Am 20 and have been seen seeing a man who is in his early 40s. He is married and is very friendly with my parents. (They don't know what is going on.)

This man's wife lives in L.A., and he lives in the desert for health reasons.

His wife comes out to visit him for a weekend every three months or so. Sometimes he goes to visit her. They don't have much of a marriage.

This man has given me the only happiness I've ever known. He is kind, warm and loving, and has been very good to me. My girl friend says he's too old for me and that I should try to get interested in someone closer to my own age. I've tried and can't do it. Boys my age are to immature for me. All they want is sex. I want something more from a relationship, and I have it with this man. I'm not hurting anyone.

So what do you advise?

HAPPY

DEAR ABBY: If you're "happy," why did you write? You are hurting yourself by continuing in a relationship that is going nowhere. Wives usually find out. And so do parents. Furthermore, eventually you'll want marriage, and this man already has a wife.

He is probably flattered to have a young girl interested in him, and you're flattered because a man his age is interested in you. If you don't want to be a loser, the advice from here is — lose HIM.

DEAR ABBY: Now that all the excitement has died down over all the Johns who resented the fact that their name is used as a synonym for "toilet," may I have my say?

My parents christened me "Fanny." Now, how did my name even become a synonym for the part of one's anatomy that one refers to in polite society as a "backside"?

GRIPES MINE

DEAR GRIPES: There are several explanations, but the one that makes the most sense to me is this: During World War I, the members of the First Aid Nurses Yeomanry (or F.A.N.Y.), a British women's ambulance unit, were known as "FANNY." And they were reputed to have been well-reared. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: No! No! No! I protest your answer to Mother, whose third daughter was stillborn. She was asked, "How many children have you?" not "How many times have you been pregnant?"

The response you suggest, "We have two little girls — our third daughter was stillborn," can only make the questioner uncomfortable and keep alive the feeling of sorrow and loss.

C'mon, Abby, "We have two darling daughters," said with a big smile, is the healthiest, kindest and most positive answer for all involved.

Unless she wants sympathy, that mother should keep her medical history out of her conversation.

MOTHER OF THREE DEAR MOTHER: You are right. I was wrong.

It would be unrealistic to expect that talking sense about B12 shots will have any immediate deterrent effect on the quarts of this chlorococles cure-all that are being needed into quivering buttocks with such relentless regularity.

B12 shots have become the front-runner to fill the role once honorably occupied by "a tonic to build me up" and have acquired the same persuasive ring of therapeutic authenticity which was summed up in susceptible minds by a prescription for "beef, iron and wine."

Although B12 does not have the earthy assurance of beef and iron, it has somehow, like wine, lodged itself into the popular mind as a cure-all of downs and ups, blues, butterflies in the midriff, the all-gone feeling and the "I'm coming down with something" syndrome.

Working on the theory that if a little is good, a lot is better, it is usually given in what are referred to as "massive" doses. ## Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act

BRITISH COLUMBIA

PREAMBLE

By proclamation published in the Canada Gazette on July 12, 1972, an Electoral Boundaries Commission was established for the Province of British Columbia. That Commission was to readjust the boundaries of electoral districts in British Columbia using the 1971 decennial census. The Commission submitted a Report to the Representation Commissioner but the Report was not acted on because of the enactment in 1973 of the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Suspension Act (Chapter 23, Statutes of Canada, 1973-74).

On December 31, 1974, the Representation Act (Chapter 13, Statutes of Canada, 1974-75) came into effect. That Act authorized the establishment of a new Electoral Boundaries Commission for British Columbia which is to readjust the boundaries of electoral districts in British Columbia again using the 1971 decennial census.

Notice of Sitings

Pursuant to the provisions of the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act, Chapter E-2, Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970 (the Act), the Electoral Boundaries Commission for the Province of British Columbia (the Commission) proposes that the twenty-eight (28) electoral districts assigned to British Columbia be as described in this advertisement and as illustrated by the maps hereinafter set out. The Commission is required to hold sittings to hear representations by interested persons in respect of the proposed electoral districts. For this purpose the Commission will sit at the following places and times:

1. CHILLIWACK, Slesse Room, Evergreen Hall, 209 Corbould Street South, Tuesday, October 21, 1975, 11:00 a.m.
2. COURTENAY, Court House, 420 Cumberland Road, Wednesday, October 8, 1975, 10:00 a.m.
3. FORT ST. JOHN, Court House, 10500—100 Street, Monday, September 8, 1975, 10:00 a.m.
4. KAMLOOPS, Canadian Inn, 339 St. Paul Street, Friday, September 12, 1975, 10:00 a.m.
5. KELOWNA, Capri Motor Hotel, Highway No. 97, Tuesday, September 16, 1975, 10:00 a.m.
6. NANAIMO, Court House, Front Street, Tuesday, October 7, 1975, 10:00 a.m.
7. NELSON, Provincial Government Building, 310 Ward Street, Friday, September 19, 1975, 10:00 a.m.
8. OLIVER, Court House, West 7th Street, Wednesday, September 17, 1975, 10:00 a.m.
9. PRINCE GEORGE, The Inn of the North, 770 Brunswick Street, Tuesday, September 9, 1975, 10:00 a.m.
10. REVELSTOKE, Court House, 320 Wilson Street, Monday, September 15, 1975, 10:00 a.m.
11. TERRACE, Court House, 4506 Lakelse Avenue, Thursday, October 2, 1975, 11:00 a.m.
12. VANCOUVER, Tax Review Board Court Room, Bank of Canada Bldg., 900 West Hastings Street, Thursday, October 23, Friday, October 24 and Saturday, October 25, 1975, 10:00 a.m.

14. WILLIAMS LAKE, Court House, 540 Borland Street, Thursday, September 11, 1975, 10:00 a.m.

STATUTORY CONDITION PRECEDENT TO THE RIGHT TO MAKE A REPRESENTATION

The Commission is precluded by the Act from hearing any person desiring to make a representation who has not given notice in accordance with Section 17(4) of the Act. The Commission, therefore, cannot hear a representation from anyone who has not given notice in writing to the secretary to the Commission within twenty-three days from the date of publication of this advertisement. The notice must state the name and address of the person by whom the representation is sought to be made and indicate concisely the nature of the representation and the interest of such person. Notices should be mailed or delivered to the secretary to the Commission at this address:

The Secretary
Electoral Boundaries Commission for British Columbia
Box 10138 Pacific Centre
700 West Georgia Street
VANCOUVER, B.C.
V7Y 1C6

Dated at VANCOUVER, this eighth day of July, 1975.

J.D. TAGGART
Chairman of the Electoral Boundaries
Commission for the Province of British Columbia

RULES

1. These rules may be cited as "The Rules of the Electoral Boundaries Commission for the Province of British Columbia, 1975".

2. In these rules:

- (a) "Act" means the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Act, Chapter E-2 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1970;
- (b) "Commission" means the Electoral Boundaries Commission for the Province of British Columbia;
- (c) "advertisement" means the advertisement published by the Commission pursuant to Section 17(2) and referred to in Section 17(4) of the Act;

(d) "secretary" means the secretary to the Commission.

3. Only one person shall be heard in the presentation of a representation at a sitting unless, in special circumstances, the Commission decides otherwise.

4. A person giving notice pursuant to Section 17(4) of the Act of intention to make a representation shall state in the notice at which of the places designated by the advertisement as a place of sitting such person wishes to make the representation.

5. If a person giving notice pursuant to Section 17(4) of the Act fails to comply with the provisions of Rule 4, the secretary shall forthwith enquire to ascertain from such person the place at which such person wishes to appear to make a representation.

6. Rules 4 and 5 are made for administrative purposes only and do not operate to prevent a person who has given a notice of intention to make a representation pursuant to and in compliance with Section 17(4) of the Act from making the representation at any sitting of the Commission set out in the advertisement, subject only to the power of the Commission, or the Chairman thereof, pursuant to Rule 7, to cancel a sitting at any place if it appears that no one will make a representation at the sitting at that place.

7. If it appears that no one will make a representation at any place designated by the advertisement as a place of sitting, the Commission, or the Chairman thereof, may cancel the sitting at such place.

8. If a quorum cannot be present at a place of sitting on the date set by the advertisement, the Commission, or the Chairman thereof, may postpone that sitting to a later date.

9. In the event of the cancellation or postponement of a sitting, the secretary shall forthwith give notice thereof to any person whom the Commission, or the Chairman thereof, deems should receive such notice and the Commission, or the Chairman thereof, shall give public notice of such cancellation or postponement of a sitting. The notices to be given to individuals and to the public may be given by such means as the Commission, or the Chairman thereof, considers adequate in the circumstances.

10. Two members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum for the holding of a sitting to hear representations.

11. If it appears at a sitting of the Commission that the Commission cannot complete hearing representations within the time allowed for the sitting, the Commission may adjourn the sitting to a later date at the same place or, taking into account the convenience of persons whose representations have not been heard or have been only partly heard, may adjourn the sitting to a sitting of the Commission elsewhere.

Reasons for Proposals

The 1971 decennial census established the population of British Columbia as 2,184,621. As a result of amendments made to the British North America Act in 1974, British Columbia is entitled to be represented in the House of Commons by twenty-eight (28) members: five more than at present. This requires the establishment of twenty-eight (28) electoral districts. The population of the province divided by 28 yields 78,022. This is the electoral quota for the province. The Act provides that the population of each electoral district shall correspond as nearly as may be to the electoral quota but that, in circumstances specified in the Act, the population of electoral districts may exceed the electoral quota or be less than the electoral quota, in each case to an extent not greater than 25% of the electoral quota.

The task of the Commission is to recommend the division of the province into twenty-eight (28) electoral districts and to make recommendations concerning the names and the descriptions of the boundaries of the electoral districts.

The initial proposals of the Commission are set out below and are based on these reasons and considerations.

In making the proposals the Commission must act only on the basis of the information provided by the 1971 census as to population figures and distribution of population.

The 1975 amendment to Section 13 of the Act precludes the Commission from giving any consideration to the relative rate of growth of the population in the various regions of the province.

The existing twenty-three (23) electoral districts of necessity form the starting point for the proposals as to how the province can be divided into twenty-eight (28) electoral districts. The Commission is fortunate to have available the Reports of the 1965 and 1973 Commissions, the latter being especially helpful. The Commission has tried to utilize the additional five electoral districts given to the province by the recent amendment to the British North America Act to improve upon the recommendations of the 1973 Commission.

In general the Commission has endeavoured to ensure even distribution insofar as sparsity or density of population will allow, having regard to geographic limitations and, above all, community of interest. In so doing the Commission has tended to take maximum advantage of the tolerances permitted where this is necessary in order to respect community of interest and geographic factors.

When compared with the existing twenty-three (23) electoral districts it will be apparent that the overall effect of the Commission's proposals is to:

- (a) increase the number of electoral districts in the northern region of the province from two to three;
- (b) add two electoral districts to the Lower Mainland region;
- (c) add one electoral district to the Okanagan-Kootenay region;
- (d) increase the Vancouver Island electoral districts from four to five.

The three northern ridings, Skeena, Fort Nelson—Peace River and Prince George—Bulkley Valley have a certain inevitability about them in view of the extreme sparsity of population. Only the most minor adjustments are possible without exceeding the minus tolerance permitted and it would have been impossible to develop a riding for the northeastern section of the province without some population from the environs of Prince George.

Much the same is true of the large central riding of Cariboo—Chilcotin. While this riding has been somewhat improved by eliminating the Central Coast and the Sunshine Coast, the sparsity of population is such that a riding above minus tolerance could not be created without the inclusion of the Squamish corridor.

In the southeastern corner of the province it has been possible to improve the East Kootenay riding and all the border ridings west to, and including Fraser Valley East. This has been achieved by creating a new seat and making full use of minus tolerances, but that has been considered preferable to the alternative of encroaching upon the boundaries of Kelowna.

The Commission is pleased to have been able to establish five ridings within the city limits of Vancouver, a riding within Burnaby and another firmly centred on New Westminster. Essentially two ridings have been added to the highly populated Lower Mainland area extending from Vancouver proper to Fraser Valley West. It has not been necessary to cross the Fraser River except in Fraser Valley East where additional population was needed to permit the establishment of the eastern boundary of the riding on the regional district boundary at the height of land.

On Vancouver Island an additional seat has permitted the division of the extremely large Comox—Alberni riding into Nanaimo—Alberni and Comox—Powell River. Comox—Powell River remains a large and difficult riding and the population figure is high but community of interest establishes the southern boundary very firmly. The extension of the northerly and easterly mainland boundary of Comox—Powell River is necessary to reduce pressure on Cariboo—Chilcotin.

The Commission has reviewed the proceedings of the 1973 'Commission' and has endeavoured, wherever possible, to meet the suggestions made by interested persons to that Commission in the course of the public hearings which were conducted in all regions of the province.

In establishing the boundaries of the electoral districts the Commission has endeavoured to use lines of demarcation which can be readily recognized, such as municipal, regional district and land district boundaries or topographical features such as rivers, lakes and heights of land.

SCHEDULE A

Legal Descriptions of the Boundaries of the Twenty-eight (28) Electoral Districts in British Columbia

There shall be in the Province of British Columbia twenty-eight (28) electoral districts, each of which shall return one member. The Commission proposes that the electoral districts be named and described as follows.

In the following descriptions:

(a) reference to "street", "avenue", "road", "drive", "highway", "boulevard", "railway", "pipeline", "right of way", "strait", "sound", "channel", "pass", "passage", "inlet", "reach", "arm", "lake", "river", "creek" signifies the centre line of such street, avenue, road, etc., unless otherwise described;

(b) wherever any word or expression is used to denote a municipal area, a land district, a regional district or an electoral area within the latter, such word or expression shall indicate the territorial division as it existed or was bounded on the first day of February 1975.

The population figures of each electoral district are taken from the 1971 decennial census.

1. BURNABY consisting of the territory bounded as follows: commencing at the southwest corner of Burnaby District Municipality; thence northerly along the westerly boundary of said municipality to the Canadian National Railway right of way; thence easterly along said right of way to Sperling Avenue; thence northerly along Sperling Avenue to Hastings Street; thence easterly along Hastings Street to Inlet Drive; thence northerly along Inlet Drive to Pandora Street; thence easterly along Pandora Street to a point due north of Phillips Avenue; thence due north to the northerly boundary of Burnaby District Municipality; thence easterly along said boundary to the northeast corner of said municipality; thence southerly and westerly along the easterly and southerly boundaries of said municipality to the southwest corner of said municipality, being the point of commencement.

2. CARIBOO—CHILCOTIN consisting of:

Developer Slams Municipalities Over Rejection of Projects

Storm Drain Work Gets Oak Bay Approval

First stage of upgrading storm drains in the Windsor, Zela and Transit Road area of Oak Bay has been authorized by Oak Bay works committee.

The $190,000 job is among the major projects of the engineering department this summer and follows completion of serious flooding which occurred last winter and on previous occasions.

Further work will be necessary to complete drains to acceptable standard, engineer Geoff White said.

The department is also proceeding with the second stage of reconstruction of Cranmore Road which was rebuilt last year between Cadboro Bay Road and St. Ann's, in a project which will see widening, resurfacing, curbs and gutters installed.

White said plans for surface parking at the new municipal recreation centre are completed and that space for 180 vehicles will be available when the centre opens Oct. 3.

He said it may be possible for proposed commercial undertakings adjoining the site at Cadboro Bay-Foul Bay intersection to share their parking space with the centre for additional needs.

Marrion Street access will be closed with completion of an extension to Bee Street via Cadboro Bay Road, work which is still in progress. The resulting land becoming available is earmarked for a new credit union building to have access on both Foul Bay and Cadboro Bay.

Bike Tours To Olympics

Every Canadian bicycle owner can participate in cycling part or all the way to Montreal's Olympics in a program next summer sponsored by the federal and provincial governments.

Several tours make up Cycle Canada '76 to accommodate bikers' available time and energy — events from Victoria will range from one-day tours to a trip all the way to Montreal.

Organizers will ensure that food, shelter, sanitation and medical facilities are available to every long-distance bike rider.

First tours start in May, 1976, and final registration for the ride to Montreal will be Jan. 1, 1976.

No-Frills Trips Gain

MIAMI (UPI) — Sitting in the back of the airplane and doing without free drinks and food in return for a 35-per-cent cut in ticket price attracted 133,000 passengers and an extra $4 million in a 45-day trial period, National Airlines says.

STUDENT CHOLERA WASN'T SERIOUS

MONTREAL (CP) — The five junior college students who received treatment for cholera after returning from the Indian subcontinent contracted a mild and very "benign" form of the disease, a doctor from the department of social affairs said Monday.

The students were on a school visit with 10 other classmates and a professor to India, Nepal and Bangladesh. The trip was organized by Dawson College.

Dr. Gerard Martineau said tests from a hospital in Amsterdam, where student Liliane Laurin was first taken to hospital during a stop on the return trip, showed she had contracted a mild cholera-related sickness, which produces vomiting and dysentery.

Miss Laurin, 21, of suburban Hampstead, was permitted to return to Montreal June 28 after showing significant improvement.

Dr. Martineau said the sickness afflicting the girls is far removed from the "classic" form of cholera.

Food Poisoning Fells Twenty

MONTREAL (CP) — More than 20 persons stricken with food poisoning Monday night were taken to hospital from Montreal International Airport, an airline spokesman said.

A spokesman for a west end motel confirmed all had eaten an afternoon snack of tuna and coleslaw there.

The victims were members of a group of 42 embarking on a three-week European study

Municipal governments are making the housing crisis worse by harassing developers with regulations, Esquimalt council was told Monday.

"Every possible impediment is placed on the home builder today," wrote Logan Mayhew of National Properties Ltd. of Victoria.

Municipal governments constantly reject development proposals that would provide needed housing, he said.

Low-density development champion Ald. Larry Mann moved immediately the letter be filed, and housing committee chairman Ald. Conrad Lundgren seconded the motion.

Mayor Art Young's comment that the letter had merit and should be discussed went almost unnoticed.

"All I want to do with this letter is receive and file it. If we want to get into a fight we should do it at committee level," said Lundgren.

"Space is not requirement of privacy," Mayhew said in his letter, which added high-density development should be encouraged to ease housing shortages.

Mayhew cited his own 47,000 square feet of property, 3515 Beach Drive, he would like to subdivide and build on.

"About 27,000 square feet of it is more than we need. We could so easily reduce the size of our garden and build two delightful small homes,

"As desirable as this would be ... it's too much sweat.

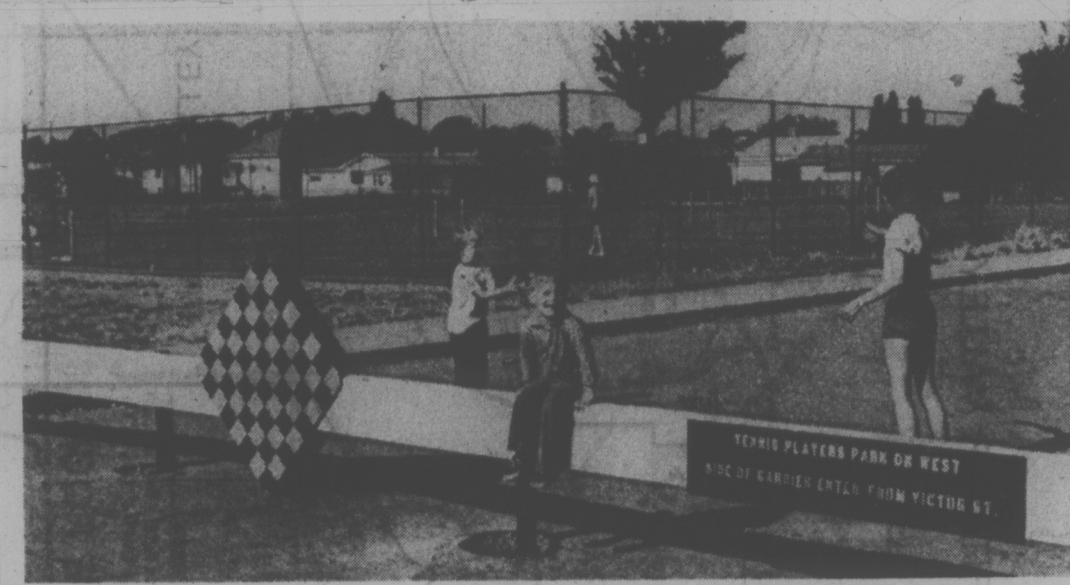

Once we started all we would get is no, no, no ... and if we were successful we would be accused on every side as being a developer, a person who preys on the pockets of the house hungry, a leech on society anxious to make a quick buck."

In an interview after the meeting Lundgren said builders are faced with no more restrictions now than before.

But Mayor Young said limitations on development densities is one reason for high-priced housing.

"The municipalities are a little too particular. If we don't allow more development the province will take over our land."

Island Indian Siege Continues in Nanaimo

NANAIMO — Vancouver Island Indians today entered their 43rd day of occupation of the offices of the Indian Affairs Department in Nanaimo today.

They met with department officials Monday, requesting that the offices be closed permanently, vowing to continue their sit-in until that happened.

Indian spokesman Don Hamilton said the sit-in will continue until Indian groups can negotiate with "someone who doesn't have to get answers from Ottawa."

William Cooke, a department official, said employees returned to their offices Monday to keep their names on the payroll and to maintain their positions as permanent staff members.

The staff was then told to return home, he said.

Budget Cut Halts Plan At Museum

Opening of the new anthropology section of the Provincial Museum, originally set for Monday, could be delayed until next April, museum officials said today.

The nearly-completed third-floor section remains closed to the public, with a sign stating: "Anthropology galleries July 7, 1975 opening postponed indefinitely. Sorry."

"We just ran out of money," museum director Yorke Edwards said today. "There's no way that any other excuse is sane."

Edwards refused to give details of the financial straits, but other sources say $200,000 was chopped from the museum's annual budget, which runs from April 1 to April 1.

He said completion of the project won't necessarily have to wait for next year's budget.

"But if you're a betting person, it's probably the beginning of the next fiscal year that things will be changed," he added.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Jack Radford could not be reached for comment this morning.

Edwards said the museum has tried to find the money to finish the project, "but we're not getting any action."

The new gallery contains an archeological section, showing part of an archeological dig. Main part of the gallery will tell the story of B.C. Indians, focusing on topics like fishing, hunting, transportation and weapons.

Modern history of the Indians will also be included.

Much of the work has been done already, said Edwards, but funds are lacking for the plate glass and special lighting needed to finish the project.

The Native Voice, a monthly newspaper that is the official organ of the Native Brotherhood of B.C. and the Raven Society, strongly criticized the budget cut in a June editorial entitled A Callous Cutback.

"The provincial government, either by design or through the now familiar action without thought for which it is becoming famous, seems hell-bent on completely alienating Indian people," it said.

"The cut in the budget for the provincial museum delaying the opening of the anthropology section is just one more example of the lack of foresight by members of the present administration."

Communists Fear Goncalves Ouster

LISBON (UPI) — The Communist party placed its vigilantes on alert today in the face of what it called a campaign to oust the Communists and possibly Premier Vasco Goncalves from the coalition government.

"The intensification of the attacks against the prime minister, the rise in counter-revolutionary propaganda and clandestine agitation, has created a tense and grave situation that the progressive forces have to meet head-on," a party statement said.

The Communist warning coincided with the opening of a meeting of the ruling armed forces movement's 240-man assembly to discuss a developing power struggle in the military hierarchy and a breakdown in governmental authority.

The Communists apparently feared that Goncalves, considered pro-Communist, would be ousted from the government. There were reports that he almost resigned last Friday.

A military spokesman said the assembly — the second most powerful body in the country — would make decisions of "fundamental importance" to Portugal's revolutionary future. Its sessions could continue for several days.

The Communist Party accused the Socialist and left-of-centre Popular Democratic parties of tacitly supporting a call by the right-of-centre Social-Democratic Centre party for a new coalition cabinet excluding the Communists and their allies.

The Communists said such a move would "provoke dangerous ruptures against the revolutionary process" and urged its followers to maintain "popular vigilance" to prevent this from happening.

It was the second time in less than a week that the Communists have called for "popular vigilance." In the first, its militants set up pickets around factories Friday to check what the party called "counter-revolutionary — pretensions."

The Communist alerts and the military assembly came in the midst of numerous reports of a power struggle between the moderates and radicals in the military's 30-man revolutionary council, which has legislative and executive powers.

Failure of the military to make any statement about the internal power struggle has provoked a number of complaints from newspapers and political groups.

A semi-official group linked to the extreme left, the revolutionary council of workers, soldiers and sailors, said Monday through a spokesman, "the silence surrounding palace coups only favors a return to fascism."

July 28 Hearing Likely on Centre

A public hearing, probably on Monday, July 28, will be called by Saanich on the B.C. Hydro's proposed administration centre in Royal Oak.

Council was told Monday Hydro has agreed to provide community recreation facilities on the site, which is almost 24 acres fronting on West Saanich Road on the east and Viewmont Avenue on the west.

A Hydro spokesman said today Hydro has agreed to provide two tennis courts and a jogging trail. These will be given to and administered by Saanich.

The choice of tennis courts and a jogging trail was made after Hydro had held public meeting with the Northridge Community Association and the Royal Oak Ratepayers' Association. Questionnaires completed by the association members listed these as the facilities most required.

The spokesman said plans for the centre, which will house all administration for the Vancouver Island division, with the exception of gas and transportation, have been modified to provide a lower profile for the two-storey buildings.

In addition to surface parking there will be covered parking to screen Hydro vehicles.

The centre, which will also house line crews now based at the transit centre on Gorge, as well as the stores, meter and carpenter shops, is expected to take two years to complete at a cost of between $3 million and $4 million.

Previous to Hydro acquiring the property, suggested uses for the land have included an outdoor theatre and a shopping centre. Both of these projects were opposed by nearby residents.

Missing Man Phones In

ELLENSBURG, Wash. (AP) — A five-day search for a man believed missing in the Cascade Mountains ended Monday when the man called the sheriff from the Pioneer Square section of Seattle.

The man, Henry Lucido, 19, of Cupertino, Calif., called when he heard about the search. The search started after a friend reported Lucido had missed a planned rendezvous.

He said the group members were seeking summer credits on the course which was to take them to Stockholm, Copenhagen and Munich.

High temperatures in Montreal Monday may have aggravated the victims' symptoms, one doctor said.

Doctors said tests were being made to determine the exact nature of food poisoning.

8 KILLED ON SKID ROW, MAN CHARGED

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Eight men died Monday night when flames raced through an 80-cent-a-night skid row hotel.

Police said they arrested a 61-year-old man near the hotel today and charged him with murder and arson in connection with the blaze.

Fire officials said there was no doubt that the blaze which severely damaged the three-story brick building was "incendiary in origin."

Twenty-five other men and one woman were injured, eight of them critically, authorities said.

Haddock Dumped by Ton From Eastern Fishboats

LUNenburg, N.S. (CP) — Thousands of pounds of haddock, one of the most prized of commercial fish, are being dumped overboard or put through ships' grinders as trash because of international fishing quotas.

Oscar Hirtle, a fisherman just back from a trip aboard the Lunenburg-based stern trawler Cape York, said the vessel dumped 50,000 pounds of "surplus" haddock overboard after a 20,000-pound quota was reached.

"Some boats dump as much as 100,000 pounds of haddock," he said in an interview.

The fish are dead when returned to the water, killed in the trawl before they are aboard or by the grinder, used to mince up "trash fish." It is easier to dump the unwanted fish in the grinder than to shovel them over the side.

"That was one trip, one boat," Hirtle said. "It's a sad feeling, especially when people need them so much."

Ian Langlands of National Sea Products Ltd., owners of the Cape York, said his firm is seeking changes in regulations that lead to destruction of such fish.

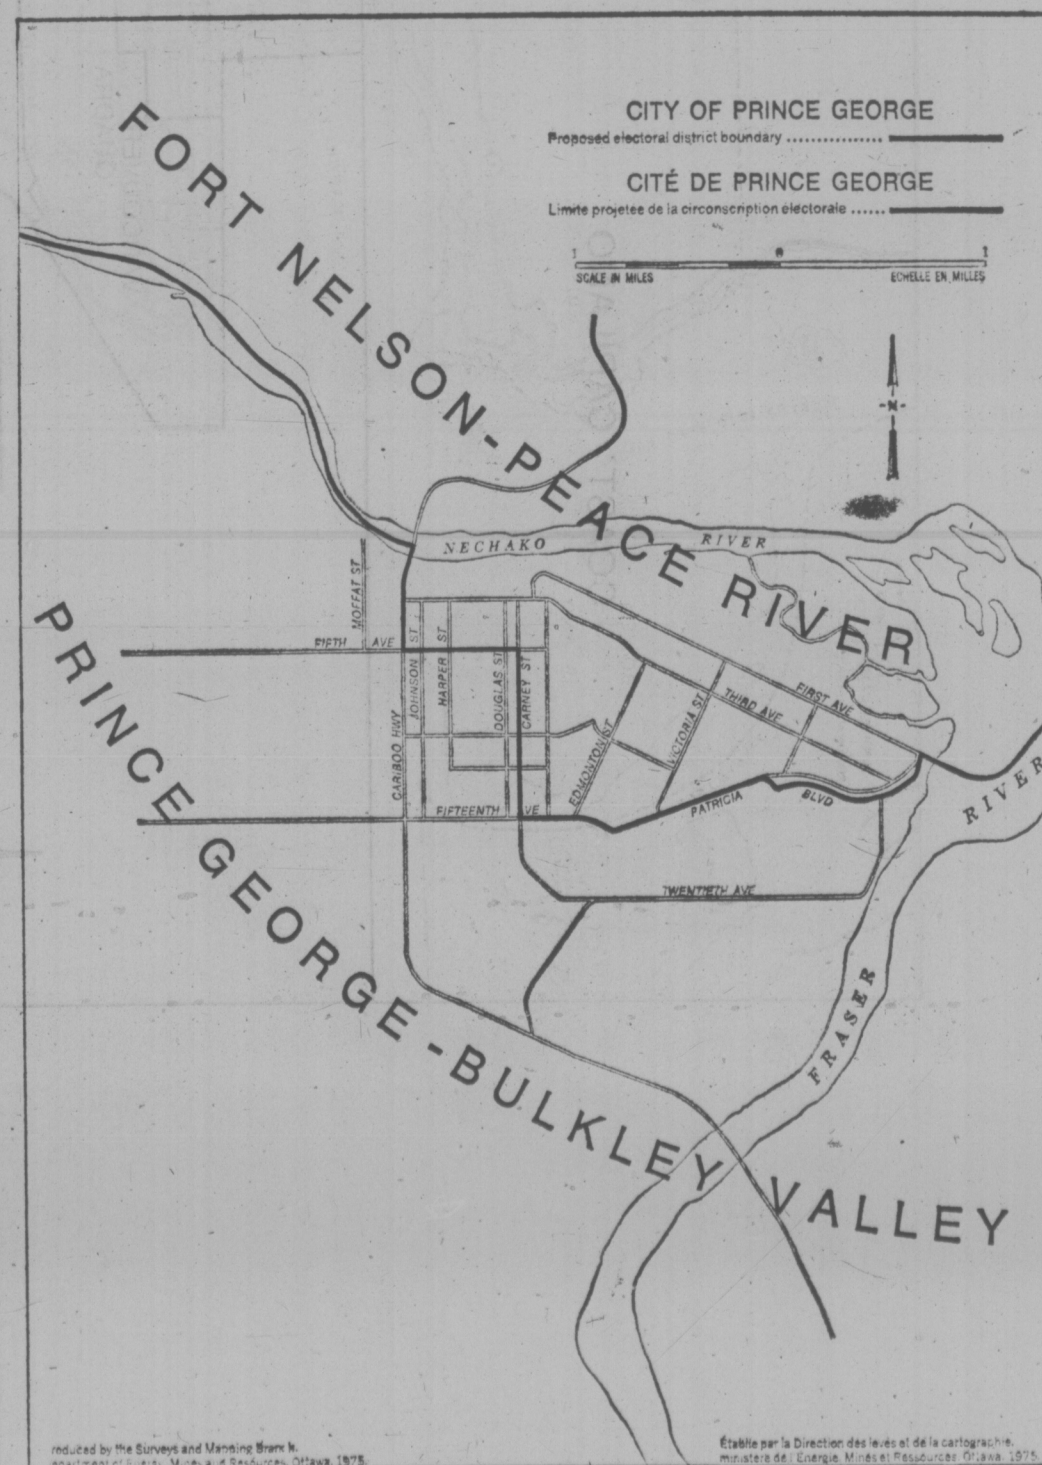

Skippers of fishing boats can be fined out of their own pockets if they land more than the weekly quota of 20,000 pounds of haddock permitted under agreements of the international commission for the northwest Atlantic fisheries.

Langlands said the haddock dumped overboard by the Cape York, representing a potential 10 cents a pound market value, meant a loss of about $150 for each member of the crew of the vessel.

Hirtle said the U.S. system of annual quotas is better "the way we do it, it could not be done in a worse way."

"... Fish are scarce but fish are being destroyed instead of saved."

Ontario's Taxpayers Get Break

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario renewed its attack on the federal government Monday with a $178-million shuffle in provincial government spending, which Treasurer Darcy McKeough said was made necessary by the "gross inadequacies" of the June 23 federal budget.

New-car buyers, students, wine drinkers and those in search of housing were chief beneficiaries of new provincial budget measures, to be financed by a $96-million cut in government programs and an $82-million reduction in civil service spending.

Premier William Davis told reporters the package, supplement to the province's April 7 budget, was also an effort "to fill the void of national leadership in the present economic crisis."

About $66 million of the $178 million was to bolster the sagging housing and automobile industries this year and another $94 million was committed for housing in 1976-77.

Measures expected to have a direct effect on some Ontario consumers include:

- Cash rebates of the five-per-cent provincial sales tax on new North American-built cars and station wagons sold between now and Dec. 31, 1975. The average buyer will save an estimated $175 on his purchase and the government is expected to pay out $24 million in rebates.
- Subsidized mortgages at 10½ per cent for an additional 9,000 low-cost housing units under the Ontario Housing Action Program.
- Reduced provincial mark-ups on imported and domestic wines following federal government reductions on excise taxes for wine.

There were no further initiatives to counteract the increase in gasoline and oil prices beyond the 90-day freeze on retail prices imposed by Premier Davis last week. Ontario residents will still have to pay the 10-cent-a-gallon excise tax imposed

Quang To Appeal

MONTREAL (CP) — A former South Vietnamese general, Dang Van Quang, said Monday he will fight a deportation order by Immigration Minister Robert Andras because "there is no proof of the allegations against me."

Quang has been accused of involvement in drug-trading and corruption in Vietnam before he arrived in Canada May 15 on a special one-year ministerial permit.

Andras said in Ottawa Monday the permit has been cancelled and the former special adviser to ex-president Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam has been asked to arrange for admission to another country.

The decision can be appealed, he said, but the government will fight any effort by the former general to remain in Canada.

Quang said in an interview that the decision meant he had become "the victim of a political campaign organized by people of another ideology."

"It's a purely political decision. I always believed Canada was a hospitable, humanitarian country."

Bakers Set to Shut Major Supermarkets

INSPECTING damage done to wall of his bedroom by bolt of lightning, John Voss, a chief warrant officer with the electrical branch at CFB Esquimalt, can thank his lucky stars. He had just opened the curtain to the window to view the rare lightning storm when a flash struck the gable to the roof, a few feet away from his head. The resulting fire caused an estimated $2,500 damage. Storm started four new forest fires on the Island.

A strike-lockout situation at major supermarkets on Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland is expected by late this week, following the breakdown of negotiations Monday between the bakers' union and the Food Industry Labor Relations Council.

The bakers' union has taken strike votes and served 72-hour strike notice at Westons' Bakeries and Mother Hubbard Bakeries on the Lower Mainland and is now awaiting strike permission from the union's international president, spokesman Hugo Comber said today.

Comber said another strike vote will be taken some time this week at Empress Foods Ltd. plant in Vancouver.

It is expected that strike action by the bakers at those three plants will precipitate a lockout of all of the major supermarkets and bakeries belonging to the food industry council.

Bill MacDonald, the council's chief negotiator said he expected council members would retaliate with lockouts at other Vancouver Island and Lower Mainland stores and bakeries.

In Victoria, Canada Safeway stores and Weston's Sunbeam Bakery would be affected by the lockout.

Comber said today he hopes the strike permission will come by Friday.

Canada Safeway stores will probably be shut down completely, as meatcutters and retail clerks union members, who are also in negotiations with the food industry council, would respect picket lines set up by the locked out bakers.

The meatcutters, at meetings in Vancouver Sunday and on Vancouver Island Monday, have voted 90 per cent in favor of strike action, but have not yet served strike notice.

The bakers have asked for a $3.50-an-hour increase on the top rate of $6.80 an hour, while the council has offered an average $1.49-an-hour increase.

A total of 600 bakers are affected by the contract talks and a strike or lockout on the Lower Mainland would halt about 75 per cent of bread production. In Victoria the percentage would be much less as McDonald's Bakeries, although a subsidiary of McGavin Toastmaster which is a member of the food industry council, has a separate contract with its bakers which does not expire until November.

The food industry council represents Canada Safeway, Empress Foods, High Low Foods, H. Y. Louie, independent Super Valu operators, Kelly Douglas, McGavin Toastmaster, Mrs. William's Baking, Overwaitea Stores, Strong's Market and Weston Bakeries.

BCPC Profit $94M

Attorney-General Alex MacDonald today announced a $94 million profit in the first full year of the British Columbia Petroleum Corporation operations, ending March 31, 1975.

MacDonald labelled it a Cinderella success story and said the figure compares very favorably with $41.9 million reported in assets for the corporation's five-month operation in 1974.

He said the majority of the revenue is cash and will be used to encourage oil exploration and development, "the weaker sister" of petroleum products.

Canadian Dollar Dipping

TORONTO — The exchange value of the Canadian dollar in relation to United States funds has dropped below 97 cents.

The closing spot price Monday in the inter-bank wholesale market was 96.84 cents, down from 97.24 cents the previous session. Last Monday, the dollar closed at 97.09 cents.

Since early May when the Canadian dollar reached 96.48, its lowest level in five years, the dollar has moved as high as 98 cents. It has been buoyed by the proceeds of debt issues by Canadian borrowers in the United States.

The U.S. dollar opened weaker on most European money markets today for the first time in 12 days. The price of gold rose in Zurich and fell in London.

Dealers could give no immediate reason for the setback in the U.S. dollar's strong run which has seen it gain on nearly all European markets since June 27.

JFK DEATH THEORY

ROME (UPI) — The Rome newspaper Il Messaggero said today the assassination of President John Kennedy was the work of 13 Cubans and Americans who felt he betrayed the anti-Castro cause by pledging not to invade Cuba.

Lucio Manisco, the newspaper's longtime New York correspondent, said he found evidence in favor of this theory through "a fortuitous series of circumstances, casual meetings in the United States and abroad and a more careful examination of documents not attached to the (Warren) report." He said some of his information was second-hand.

He said the New York Times, Washington Post and Los Angeles Times were working on the same story and that Sen. Frank Church (Dem.-Idaho) may ask the White House to reopen the inquiry.

Manisco said this version originated with Lawrence (Larry) Truckman, an "American adventurer" who was arrested in Manila in 1972 in connection with an assassination plot against President Ferdinand Marcos.

Manisco said Truckman was administered "truth serum" and under its effect told Filipino investigators of his role in the Kennedy assassination nine years earlier.

He said Kennedy was "the victim of a plot by 15 Cuban and American mercenaries, enlisted two years earlier by the Central Intelligence Agency for the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion."

The assassination was prompted by reports that Kennedy pledged to refrain from further invasion of Cuba in return for the withdrawal of Soviet missiles from the island, Manisco said. He said the group saw this as betrayal of the anti-Castro cause.

Israel-Egypt Pact Making Progress, But Not Complete

ACTION BY GANDHI URGED

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Officials of the ruling Congress party have urged Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to force the leaders of a rebellious southern state to abide by her tough emergency decrees.

Congress party officials in Tamil Nadu, India's southernmost state, called on Gandhi to use her "constitutional and administrative powers" to bring the local rulers "into line with the discipline of the emergency."

Travellers from Tamil Nadu said Monday the Liberal People's Progressive Party running the state has refused to impose press censorship and round up political opponents of Gandhi.

Gandhi declared a state of emergency across India June 26, ordering strict censorship of the press as well as a severe crackdown against her critics.

The government, which has outlawed 26 militant political groups, has reported arresting 900 opposition leaders in the past 12 days. Opposition sources insist some 6,000 persons have been detained.

In New Delhi, about 200 demonstrators carrying flags of Gandhi's Congress party cried "Shame on the CIA" as they staged a sit-down protest today in front of the United States Information Service building.

The brief rally was the first anti-U.S. outburst since Gandhi imposed emergency rule on India June 26. One emergency decree bars public slogan-shouting or gatherings of more than four people.

NEWS BRIEFS

Syria-Iraq Rift

DAMASCUS (Reuters) — Syria closed the office here of the Iraqi military attaché today and ordered its staff to leave the country within 48 hours. Arab diplomatic sources said, Syria also closed the offices of its military attaché in Baghdad, the sources added.

Fog Stalls Ships

HALIFAX (CP) — Dense fog rolling along the Atlantic coast held up ships headed for 16 East Coast ports today where the transport department has insisted on good visibility during a strike by harbor pilots. A department spokesman said 17 ships in the area of the 16 strikebound ports were "holding" 12 miles off the coast waiting for weather to improve.

Ford in Race

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Gerald R. Ford, the only U.S. president who never ran for national office, today formally announced his candidacy to run in 1976 for a full term in the White House.

As to the passes, he said, "no lines have been drawn to determine just what points of the slopes will remain in Israeli hands."

Meanwhile, Yitzhak Rabin flew to West Germany today for the first official visit by an Israeli prime minister, another milestone in the reconciliation of the two countries whose relations still are darkened by the shadow of Hitler's holocaust.

But German officials said the chief topic in Rabin's talks with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and other officials would be the new Sinai withdrawal agreement U.S. Secretary Henry Kissinger is trying to promote and other Middle East developments.

German officials indicated that Schmidt, like Kissinger, would urge Rabin to accept the need for major Israeli concessions to make progress toward Middle East peace.

Nature's Shocking Show Zaps Esquimalt Home

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

As chief warrant officer of the electrical branch at CFB Esquimalt, John Voss has an interest in electricity. But he got more than he bargained for early today when he left his bed to observe a display of lightning.

As he spread the curtain to his second-storey bedroom window at 3:50 a.m., a bolt shattered out of the sky striking the gable to his home at 870 Phoenix in Esquimalt. He's certain it was 3:50 because the bolt stopped his watch dead.

The electrical blast also knocked a hole in the wall, smashed the window, and set the roof above the hole ablaze.

Voss, who had been sleeping with his wife Ethel in a bed near the window when the electrical storm began, went to telephone the Esquimalt fire department — but the phone was dead, too.

Firemen, summoned from a neighbor's phone, later estimated damage to the house at $2,500.

The Vosses were among scores of Southern Vancouver Islanders who witnessed the spectacular storm as it crashed through the night blowing out a number of transformers, setting power poles alight and adding four new forest fires to 12 started in the area during Sunday's thunderstorm.

No one was injured but most residents passed a relatively sleepless night quaking under quilts or watching the rare display of atmospheric fireworks.

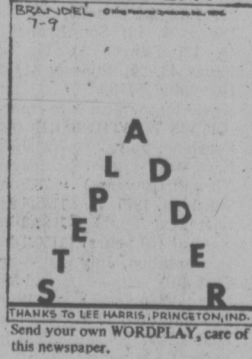

Victoria weatherman, Allan McQuarrie, who admits he

LEMON-OF-THE-YEAR ... WHAT A LOSER!

LONDON (Reuters) — A $7,750 car which needed three replacement engines, two gearboxes, two bell housings and new wiring during its first 6,000 miles has been named "worst new car of the year" by The Automobile Association of Britain.

The association's official magazine, Drive, conducted a survey of motorists' complaints to establish its Square Wheel Award for the worst new car of the year.

It chose for the unwelcome accolade a Rover 3500 made by British Leyland.

The car's owner, Robert Rouse, 54, said his first trouble started after only driving 23 miles. The car was off the road for repairs 114 days during the first 165 days of ownership.

Secret Soviet Grain Deal?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is taking steps to purchase large quantities of grain from Canada and the United States, two London newspapers report.

However, Otto Lang, cabinet minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, declined comment and U.S. spokesmen for the agriculture department and major grain firms said they were unable to confirm that large Russian purchases are in the offing.

The London Times and The Financial Times say the Russians are trying to keep the purchases secret by negotiating through third parties for sales to carry the grain to Soviet ports.

The London Times says drought in the Soviet Union has led the Russians to book up to three million metric tons of grain from Canada and to make provisional bookings with shippers for up to seven million metric tons from the U.S.

Richard Bell, a U.S. deputy assistant agriculture secretary, said:

"We are aware that the Soviets are chartering vessels for shipment of grain from North America to the Baltic Sea and Black Sea."

However, he noted that U.S.

exporters need not report sales of 100,000 tons or more until 24 hours after the deal is concluded.

He said lack of rainfall has affected spring wheat production in parts of the Soviet Union, and a bumper wheat crop is forecast for the U.S.

The reports of Soviet grain purchases are circulating on the third anniversary of a credit deal that helped Moscow buy huge amounts of American grain.

On July 8, 1972, President Richard Nixon announced a $750-million credit arrangement. Although the loan, financed through the agriculture department, was thought then to meet Russia's needs for wheat and feed grains, it turned out to be only the tip of an export iceberg.

Within a month, it was disclosed that the Soviets had secretly negotiated large cash purchases of U.S. grain, mainly wheat, amounting to more than $1 billion.

Those transactions led to soaring U.S. grain prices. That in turn led to higher domestic beef prices.

USDA officials said the Russians did not use all the $750-million line of credit provided three years ago. Under terms of the agreement, the time for using the remaining credit expires today.

Peron Abandons 50% Wage Curb

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — President Isabel Peron of Argentina has agreed to scrap her 50-per-cent ceiling on wage increases to appease the striking labor wing of the Peronist movement. But she continues to reject the union leaders' demand for the ouster of Jose Lopez Rega, her closest adviser, informed sources reported today.

The sources said Peron offered to replace some of her eight cabinet ministers. It was believed that she and Lopez Rega were prepared to sacrifice Economy Minister Celestino Rodrigo.

Rodrigo is the administrator of the government austerity plan which has resulted in a month of strikes, other protests and intensified political pressure on the president to get rid of Lopez Rega.

Leaders of the General Labor Confederation CGT who paralyzed Argentina Monday with a general strike scheduled a meeting today to consider Peron's offer. A communique indicated they would accept it.

But as long as the conservative Lopez Rega continues to be Peron's closest adviser and the virtual prime minister of her regime, a permanent reconciliation is not likely.

New York

The stock market, still beset by concern over rising interest rates, pulled back again today in quiet trading.

The Dow slipped more than six points in the first hour, with investors continuing to look ahead to the possibility of a general move in the prime rate to 7% from seven per cent in the wake of the recent uptrend in open market money rates.

The market made a partial recovery late in the morning when short-term rates levelled off. But the rebound attempt failed to draw any substantial support.

Apco Oil, the NYSE volume leader, rose  $\frac{1}{4}$  to \$17  $\frac{1}{2}$  in trading marked by a 111,000-share block at \$16  $\frac{1}{2}$ . The stock rose 3 $\frac{1}{2}$  Monday in Alaska International's announcement it plans to offer \$17.50 in price for 1.5 million Apco shares.

Polaroid climbed 2 to \$38  $\frac{1}{2}$  in active trading. In an employee newsletter, the company said its second-quarter earnings would be better than had generally been expected at the start of the year.

The NYSE's composite index was down 35.48. The Dow Jones Stock Exchange market-value index showed a 0.4 gain at 92.21.

Concord Fabrics, which reported sharply higher earnings for the quarter ended June 1, was up  $\frac{3}{4}$  at \$3  $\frac{1}{2}$  on the Amex.

Last week Town Talk told how "Skip" Whitfield had found a curious medallion engraved "Teh Tail-Waggers Club" while digging in his garden. Who knows anything about such a club? we asked.

Well, quite a few people recall it from several decades ago in Britain.

Mrs. Alice Comber of 1524 Pembroke even has an old certificate enrolling her sister-in-law's dog. It's signed by registrar A. Barker in Barking, Hmmm.

Mr. and Mrs. Geoff Horridge of 1512 Winchester recall the club for pet owners as a sort of registry and have the impression it was sponsored, in part at least, by a firm dealing in pet supplies.

The clubs were all over England and promoted care for dogs.

Wives of Saanich policemen don't sleep easily when their husbands are on night patrol with a woman police officer, according to Ald. Sandy Noel.

Amid guffaws and giggles at Monday's council meeting, Noel quickly explained the wives don't fear any hanky-panky but worry because their husbands had no brawn to back them up in a tight situation.

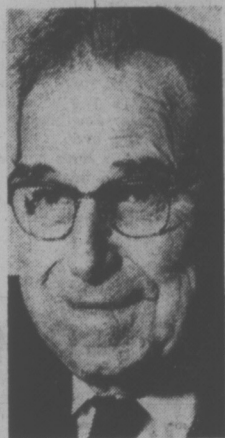

"A policeman would feel a lot more secure with 180 pounds of brawn to back him up," he said, adding that night patrols could bring dangerous confrontations for the police.

Noel said he realized there was room for women on the force and when they graduated from the police academy they often had high marks, were trained in judo and also carried firearms.

But Noel said he was "very disenchanted" with the practice of having women officers on night patrol. He asked for a survey to determine how many policemen felt the same way.

If he finds he's alone in his concern, Noel has promised to make a public apology to the women on the force. Saanich has three women police officers.

It isn't official yet but it looks as if the provincial government is going to recognize former Saanich alderman Les Passmore for his determination in fighting for the underdog and low-cost housing even when it meant losing votes.

Mayor Ed Lum said Monday the provincial housing department has suggested the Marigold housing project in Saanich be named Passmore Place. Lum said he has heard Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson is in favor of the idea, and of course so are Saanich aldermen.

While on the subject of names for projects, city alderman Malcolm Anderson was miffed today when he found he'd possibly missed out on the $500 prize offered in the multi-million dollar complex on the Government-Courtney-Wharf-Broughton block.

Anderson has said publicly the contest is stupid but he was going to submit the name Nordal Mall, after the former owners of the property.

Entries were to be sent to a Victoria Press box number by June 30. Anderson had his entry completed and ready to go but found today it was still in his pocket.

Bleary-eyed students at the University of Victoria whose only eye-opener for early classes has been free coffee in the Student Union Building before 9 a.m. may be out of luck in September.

Although the SUB cafeteria will cling to the 10-cent cup of coffee it may have to subsidize the low price by cutting out the morning freebie, said student president Clayton Shold.

Coffee elsewhere on campus costs 15 and 20 cents. Prices will rise slightly this year on some SUB food items, said Shold.

When North Saanich municipal workers seeded the new McDonald Park Road boulevard earlier this year, they were expecting a good crop of green grass for their efforts.

Instead they got a good crop of yellow mustard. Two workmen were sent out last week to mow the weed, but not before several residents of the area started wondering if the municipality or the seed wholesaler had goofed and mixed up grass seed with mustard seed.

Municipal Administrator Ted Pairs says the mustard seed may have just drifted in from neighboring fields, or it might have come mixed in with the grass seed.

But the stuff has now been mowed and the municipality is hoping for a green instead of yellow boulevard next year.

Few, if any, of the 180 ensigns aboard the two Japanese ships Katori and Yamagumo that left here Monday for Vancouver know that one of their comrades is buried in the naval cemetery in Esquimalt, where Rear-Admiral Eiichi Tsunehiro laid a wreath on Saturday.

A news story out of Washington, D.C., says: "Unmarried and married servicewomen who become pregnant automatically will be allowed to remain in the military under a new Pentagon policy..."

Automatically? It's the age of automation to be sure. But pregnancy by whatever means, what's the policy in the Canadian armed forces?

A spokesman at Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt, advises that Canadian servicewomen who become pregnant need not resign unless they choose but they must take 15 weeks leave without pay. During that time they receive full medical coverage and can apply for unemployment benefits — which shows how much the military has to learn about the trials and tribulations of diaper-changing.

There is no differentiation between married and unmarried servicewomen as far as the military regulations go.

Saanich 'Cornered' by Gov't

Saanich was backed into a corner by provincial government policy over hefty increases in policemen's salaries, council was told Monday.

Municipal solicitor D. A. M. Patterson, on the request of Mayor Ed Lum, explained that the Police Act made policemen employees of provincial government-appointed police boards, not municipalities.

Lum said today the salaries negotiated with the force had been allowed for in earlier budget sessions. The increases had been recommended by the police board.

The mayor said the increases were in line with those awarded Canadian Union of Public Employees members and, therefore, council had not opposed them.

If the increases had been considered too high by council, Lum said Saanich could have appealed to the B.C. Police Commission. The commission, however, could turn down a municipality's appeal.

Patterson's explanation came after Ald. Fred Severson said council had been "unfairly attacked" by other councils for giving policemen an average 22.28 increase.

Lum said the provincial government had set the pattern for large wage hikes and forced the settlement on Saanich.

"They gave their sheriff deputies $200 more than our probation constables," Lum said.

Severson took exception to Columnist columnist Gordie Hunter's recent article, blaming Saanich council for the large salary increases.

Ald. Mel Couveller noted, "He (Hunter) is notorious for not doing his homework."

Couveller said as early as February council had written the provincial government, stating the financial burden for policing was too high for municipalities to carry alone.

Lum said because of the "mobility of criminals today" he shared Attorney-General Alex Macdonald's conviction that the federal government should shoulder 50 per cent of the cost of policing.

Lum said criticism of the settlement by Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen was triggered by jealousy.

"This is the first time Saanich has come up with a contract first," Lum asserted.

"The city has been tardy. The mayor (Pollen) has been away for quite a few months this year already."

NEW HOME NEEDED FOR TREASURES

Maltwood Closed Forever

By ELEANOR BOYLE
Times Staff

The University of Victoria's stately Maltwood Museum in Royal Oak with its priceless historical art works is closed permanently to the public.

Exhibitions run each summer have cost UVic too much money and contributed to damaging the valuable works, honorary curator Martin Seggar said today.

Sunlight and humidity have ruined some of the items beyond repair, and the museum has been closed for restoration of other treasures.

Although 2,000-3,000 people visit the museum each summer it will have to be closed down permanently and more mer it will have to be closed and more suitable building facilities found, said Seggar.

"Maltwood was never constructed as a museum," he said.

The building allows for no control of humidity or natural light, both of which destroy aging art works, he said.

He pointed out an Oriental wall hanging from the early Ming dynasty with fabric that has cracked because of the effects of natural light.

"These kinds of things would keep marvelously in an 18th century castle that isn't heated. That's the irony of it," he said.

The fate of the building will be decided by the university by Katharine Maltwood has not been decided — but the terms of the will say it must be used for historical artifacts.

A suggestion was recently made at a UVic board of governors meeting that the terms of the will be changed and the Seggar said the restoration process will take at least two years, and some of the pieces including a water-damaged Chinese ancestor portrait about 200 years old can only be restored by an expert in Ottawa's National Art Gallery.

DAMAGED ORIENTAL ancestor portrait painted with water colors on silk is almost ruined beyond repair says honorary curator Martin Seggar.

Seatbelts Called No Rights Issue

Mandatory use of car seatbelts isn't a civil rights issue, Dave Robertson of Vancouver, president of the B.C. Civil Liberties Association, said Monday.

He was responding to Capital Region Safety Council manager Colin Barker who said a compulsory seatbelt law in B.C. could be opposed by civil liberties groups.

A provincial government departmental committee said last week the law in inevitable.

But Robertson said driving without seatbelts doesn't rank along with life and liberty as a basic human right.

He wouldn't consider a mandatory seatbelt law a violation of civil liberties.

"Everybody accepts that the government should legislate in that field for public safety. When you take out a driver's licence you automatically accept the regulations that go along with it," said Robertson.

He said mandatory seatbelts would be no more a violation of freedom than traffic lights.

His association recognizes the need for laws and does not object to government safety regulations, he said.

Condominium Block Replaces Hospital

A 70-unit condominium block will replace the Cedars Private Hospital on Menzies which has fallen to the bulldozer.

The building, three storeys over a concrete parking garage, is now in the planning stages.

Property owner Neil de Macedo refused to say today what provision was made for the former residents of the hospital.

"I'm just not going to make any comment," he said. "It's none of your business really."

De Macedo sold Aberdeen Private Hospital, 1450 Hillside, to the provincial government in March for $1.1 million following his announcement that the hospital would close in May, leaving its 93 residents without care.

Eggs Going Up Next Week

A three-cents-a-dozen producer price increase for eggs is expected to be reflected in retail stores here this week.

Egg producers were granted 75 cents for A large, 70 cents for A medium and 49 cents for A small by B.C. Egg Marketing Board. The raise was effective Monday.

In Vancouver, where eggs bring one cent a dozen less to producers, a spokesman for the board said the official increase would be undermined if dissident egg producers undercut prices in a campaign against marketing board regulation.

The raise was allowed as a result of declining supply brought on by new U.S. limits on imports and a reduction of flocks under Canadian Egg Marketing Agency rules. A half-dozen dissidents with flocks larger than CEEMA permits have refused head counts by inspectors.

The spokesman said the Egg Marketing Board has the legal power to set all producer egg prices in the province and CEEMA regulations were designed to stabilize and keep farm incomes up.

Ask The Times

Q. My husband and I retired here a few months ago from Alberta. When we saw our first Victoria Day Parade we were impressed by the size of some of the marching bands, particularly the American ones. Were they unusually large or was this a special feature of this year's parade? L.N.

A. They may have been larger than usual because of this year's theme, Music. Certainly, there were more bands in the parade than ever before. The Americans, as you have guessed, have a penchant for large mass bands. There were 1,976 musicians and 54 drum majors, flag bearers and directors in the band that marched two miles down Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington for former president Nixon's second inaugural parade on Jan. 20, 1973.

PICKET LINES went up at two Saunders and Hitchman Service Ltd. shops this morning as striking Insurance Corporation of B.C. employees protested the firm's handling of accident damage estimates and vehicle repairs, contrary to a request from the union.

Office and Technical Employees, Local 378. The ICBC employees have been on strike since May 20. Pickets are Luis Ituarte and Anton Larsen. As the sign seems to suggest somebody must yield. (John McKay photo)

Brewery Switching Sought

B.C. hotelkeepers have applied to the Liquor Administration Branch for permission to switch to alternative brewers during a strike of Molson's brewery which has cut supplies of draught beer to 50 pubs.

Patrick Hungenberg, president of the Victoria section of B.C. Hotel Association, said, "wheels are in motion" to have the LAB consider the application that would help the struggling hotels to survive.

Regulations forbid hotels changing their source of draft beer supply except after serving notice at specified times.

None of the 50 hotels normally supplied by Molson's is believed to have closed, but the serving meanwhile of bottled beer has been barely sufficient to keep them open.

Five of the pubs affected are in Greater Victoria: Kings, Century Inn, Gorge, Goldstream and Tudor House.

Meanwhile, the situation is further aggravated by a shortage of bottled beer caused by the Molson shut-down and heavier consumer demand at liquor stores and pubs. Some pubs have stopped selling bottled beer for off-licence consumption.

Both government liquor stores and hotel pubs are on a quota basis for the supply of bottled beer during the current situation. The supply being restricted to 20 per cent of normal consumption.

One hotel manager said others in the association would like the LAB to seek supplies of surplus beer from other provinces and Washington until the B.C. brewing industry returns to normal.
